DUKES' SEAT.

NOT AT THE COMMITTEE'S MEETI'G. another Letter to Captain Nutt which was

port to be Made To-day-A New Election. Harrisburg Dispatch to the Times. "Is N. L. Dakes here?" asked Chairman Ammerman, of the Dukes investigat.

ing committee, at its meeting on Tuesday evening. Mr. Ammerman knew that Dukes was not there and his question did not cause any of the dozen or fifteen men in the room to crane their necks, for they also knew it. Still, in the committee's opinion, the formal question had to be asked, as well as some dozens of other inquiries whose answers contained no news Ammerman's interrogatory was made after Sergeant at Arms Boland had sworn that he had 'personally delivered to the keeper of the Uniontown boardinghouse, where Dukes had boarded for eight years, the committee's notification that it would meet on Tuesday and hear anything that he might desire to say on the subject of the inquiry. Dukes was not in Union-town when Boland called for him and the sergeant at arms had no information except heresay that Dukes had received the notice. To convince the careful committee that Uniontown was Dukes' place of residence, Boland presented a certificate from the Fayette county commissioners that Dukes had been assessed there as an attorney-at-law ever since 1878.

As soon as the chairman felt sure that Dukes was not in the room, he looked over his audience of reporters and asked f there was anybody present to represent Dukes. Finding that there was not, the committee, through the evidence of P. Gray Meek, chief clerk of the House, convinced themselves that Dukes had not been sworn in as a representative. The records, Meek added, did not show that Dukes had ever given any reason for not appearing to take the oath. It was brought out incidentally during Meek's examination that the signatures of only 192 members were on the oath book. The remaining eight, he said, had probably been sworn in without signing, but that was a matter for his predecessor, Henry Huhn, to explain. Cashier Bowman, of the Fayette county National bank, who identified the Dukes letters in court and who had been subpecnaed to do a like service for the committee, telegraphed to Ammerman that a wreck on the Pennsylvania railroad, west of Greensburg, had caused him to miss a train connection and would prevent him from arriving in Harrisburg until late to-defendant's attorneys. Furth read the stockholders had promised to vote his letters to his fellow committeemen and ticket, but failed to do so, either because Solvent and Santord's linker, all notes Dukes to Nutt. The counsel did not insist upon its production at the trial, for the reason that it would not have been important evidence. The witness added that if the committee so desired he would let them see the letter, but be wished it to be kept from the public. The committee said they would like to see it and assured Baily that they would keep its contents secret. as they were indisposed to "blast any more

Before the meeting of the House they will report to the general ju diciary committee, so that the latter can send in a recommendation some time dur ing the day that Dukes' seat be declared vacant and that the speaker call for a special election to fill the vacancy.

Dukes Not Accepting the Pressing Invita-tion to Leave Uniontown. Dukes has not complied with the notice served on him to leave Uniontown inside of twenty-four hours, and as he keeps himself in close confinement in his room at the hotel he has not as yet been molested. It is not known what the next step will be, as everything depends on the movements of Dukes himself. The one thing that seems to be fully settled upon. however, is that he cannot stay in Uniontown. Why, if he expects to remain in town, he does not venture out on the streets, instead of locking himself in his room, no one seems to know. His object in coming to town, it is claimed, was to consult with counsel about resigning his seat in the Legislature. But this business is now over, his resignation having been written out and sent to Harrisburg. His tarrying is a source of much public agitation and can only result in trouble sooner

THE DEMOCRATIC DUTY. Why Contend About an Abstraction?

. Y. Sun. The discussion of the tariff question rages all along the line, and the Democratic free traders push it with vigor. The chance of breaking up the party would seem to be really welcome to them. They go in for anything to beat Sam Randal with a zeal and perseverance that might be worthy of praise if there were only a little common sense in their purpose. What do our free trade friends want, and what do they expect? They know as well as everybody else, that there is no present possibility of changing the tariff enacted in the closing hours of the late Congress. Before any change can be effected, must be a Democratic Senate and a Democratic president. In spite of all their declamation, the tariff is bound to remain just as it is for many, many mouths that are to come. When both Houses of Con gress are Democratic, and when there is a Democratic president-if the country is ever to enjoy such a blessing-then the tariff may be altered; but so long as there is a Republican majority in the south wing of the capitol and a Republican executive in the White House, so long all efforts to get away from the present rates of duties must prove entirely nugatory.

Meanwhile what is to be done? Is all hope of electing a Democratic president to expire in a general gush of verbosity? Must we all turn aside, free traders, protectionists, independent philosophers, and all, to engage in a fruitless controversy concerning this tariff which we cannot alter? Must the Democracy be broken into fragments in a dispute about an abstrac tion, an unrealty, an indetermined doctrine, which cannot possibly be applied in practice? We hope not; yet what else can be intended by the loud proclamation that before the presidential election the an unqualified free trader of the Ken-

not be elected speaker, though he is confessedly the most competent, the best qualified, and the ablest of all the candidates? What if his opinions on some abstract question are not believed to be in harmony with the opinions of some other gentlemen, are not all of them indisput-ably sound and faithful as members of the Democratic party? Is there any sounder Democrat than he? But, we may be asked, is the Democ racy to offer no relief to the people who racy to offer no relief to the people who have so long been crushed under the Remedies. burdens of excessive taxation? If it is impracticable to change the tariff, is there nothing else that can be done in the way of alleviation?

be wiped out, except the tax upon distilled spirits. The tobacco tax, the lager beer tax, should be removed entirely. Nothing should be left of the internal

a fixed by free traders or protection sts. When the average of duties on imports must be from forty to forty-five per cent., the strictest revenue tariff will be quite satisfactory even to the hardest shelled protectionist.

On this basis, the Democracy will not need to strike its victorious flag, but can go forward conquering and to conquer. THE OLD BOARD ELECTED.

We answer that, now as heretofore, the first duty of the Democrats is to abolish the internal revenue system; and this is a duty there is no difficulty in doing at the very next session of Congress. Cuttoura Mesolvent operates with energy upon the bowels, liver, kidneys and pores of the revenue taxes except the tax on spirits. The internal revenue system is a product of the civil war, and it should be obliterated. The only part of it that should be tolerated is the whisky tax, and this should be made to yield a sufficient sum to pay the arrears of pensions that have to be provided for. All other internal revenue taxation should be extinguished. The revenues necessary for the support of the government and the payment of the public debt should be derived exclusively from duties upon imports. And this being once more established as our invariable rule, it will make very little difference afterward whether the uew rates of the tariff shall be fixed by free traders or protection ists.
