FARM NOTES.

Worm and the Borer.

There are two worms and the borer the first, which has lately become very prevalent and destructive in denuding the bushes of their leaves, makes its attack soon after the leaves are of full size. The insect begins its work by laying the eggs soon after the leaves appear. The best remedy, as we have for two or three years recommended, is the white hellebore, in the powdered state which should be dissolved in hot water, a teaspoonful of the powder to an ordinary bucket of water and applied with a sprin-

The borer is a different insect, and works in the manner of passing through the pith from bottom to top. The moths appear early in June; the eggs soon hatch, and the worm at once bores through the wood to the centre, feeding as it progresses upon the pith. The pressure of the steam may be known by the yellowish appearance of the leaves. The best remedy is to sprinkle the bushes as soon as the moth makes its advent, with whale oil soap and water, about a pound of the soap to four or five gallons of water, repeating it once or twice.

The currant worm does its work rapidly in consuming the leaves, and they must be attacked the moment they show themselves. A single day's operations, unchecked, will play havoc. A plentiful supply of coal ashes, sieved, may also destroy them. They multiply rapidly, and when not all disposed of, enough may remain to do much damage.

Diseases Among Livestock. Like in the human race, epidemics among livestock are frequent and destructive. They come nobody knows how or whence; and pass away nobody can tell why. History records so many of these, and we all remember enough of them, that it is useless to dilate upon them. This being so, it is hardly to be expected that beasts will escape similar visitations. Yet some people seem to expect this, for when an epidemic breaks out among the beasts of the field it produces about as much commotion in a community as the prevalence of cholera among bipeds. Every sort of resource is had to counteract it. County conventions are held; Legislatures appoint commissions to investigate the disease, and find out a remedy or a preventative; impracticable laws are demanded, and the whole agricultural community effervesces as to what is to be done for their safety. Suddenly the epidemic vanishes; the discussion as to the causes which produced it, filling newspapers and periodicals with a mass of speculation which not one person in a hundred ever reads, as suddenly comes to an end. All seem to be well, not only the all-absorbing question of the epidemic, but the common course of things we must expect to be visited by these epidemics. Horses, cattle, sheep and swine, according to their nature, will get sick and die, curtailing a loss which all who own beasts must regret to see. And when an epidemic assails them, it is useless to discuss whether it came from abroad or is indigenous, or where it originally appeared. The first consideration should be to study its diagnosis and apply a remedy. It must be remembered that there are losses and mistakes in every business. Unfavorable circumstances cannot at all times be avoided or controlled.

Field marketing. Though this heading may look rather formidable it is really as simple as possible in carrying out. It is not a new suggestion now made for the first time in these columns, for it has been referred to repeatedly as a matter that is deserving of more attention than it generally receives. Even when first mentioned by us it was not an original idea, inasmuch as our attention was called to it while visiting one of the best conducted farms in a neighboring county. It is this: In removing the hay from the field, that portion known as raskings should be allowed to remain for two reasons: One is that it will not pay for the labor in gathering up; the other that it does pay, and twice over, in being scattered over the field, and acting as a mulch to the exposed roots of the stubble. These raskings keep the roots cool and moist and will add largely to next year's yield of timothy or orchard grass as the case may be. Many first class farmers pursue this method at all times, but there are so many who do not that we regard it as worth while to remind them of the advantages of it, and ask them to give it a trial.

Muck for Sandy Soils. It is encouraging to see that in some portions of the Southern States, where they are tardy in adopting new methods of culture or hints leading to experiments, they are beginning to find out that muck hauled upon sandy soils acts almost as effectively as a dressing of manure, while it is far more lasting, and greatly adds to its productivity. This, however, is no new discovery. We recommended it, as did our correspondents, as long as thirty years ago, and pointed out instances in which muck was applied to sandy soils that had been attended with marked success. Even pure clay hauled upon very light soils and intermingled therewith by the simple operation of cultivation, has been followed by excellent results, the land increasing its crops fully one-half. Where muck or manure is as convenient of transportation as manure, there is no question that its application as here suggested would prove of the most decided advantage. Even in gardens, where the soil has become exhausted by long continued cultivation, a dressing of clay is far better than a coat of the best manure. Coal ashes, when applied to very compact soil, acting in a reverse order, will cause it to be more friable, and in this way—which we believe to be the only way—are these ashes of any benefit.

SILVER CREEK, N. Y., Feb. 6, 1880. GENTS: I have very low and have tried everything, but no advantage. I heard of our Hop Bitters recommended by so many and I concluded to give them a trial. I did and now am around and healthy, improving and am nearly as strong as ever. W. H. WELLER. mar22-3610ed
