anxious to behold the pageant.
As this was the first fair day since the ciscus started many of the uniforms and costumes displayed were worn for the first time and the georgeous garbs were seen bright and fresh. There was the usual display of triumphal cars; gilded and carved wagons; Roman chariots, drawn by two, four and six horses; menagerie vans displaying thrilling side paintings; the teams of trick ponies and dwarf mules; gay cavaliers and equestriennes; knights, in glittering mail and armed cap a pie; groups of masked and grotesque figures, and heralds, musicians and other features of all well regulated shows. But the georgeous barge of Cleopatra, surmounted with statuesque figures of her slaves and other accompaniments of Egyptian luxury; the great teams and the procession of elephants of all sizes; and the special feature of the Lalla Rookh group, borne on sumptuous thrones carried on the backs of elephants; the great gilded carving of the American eagle and the federal coat of arms, and other signal displays were much in advance of what is wont to be displayed here and fully satisfied the spectators that an unusually good show was to be given on the grounds.

The parade, followed by the hundreds of small boys, enthusiastic men and many mothers carrying their children in arms, moved out to the circus grounds on Mc-Govern's lots in the northern part of the city between North Queen and Duke streets, where a largely attended and satisfacts, where a largely attended and satisfacts. isfactory performance was given this afternoon and another is to be given to night. The body steadily increased until 7 o'clock, at which hour the several special trains chartered for the occasion were boarded by the delegates, and the start for Philadelphia was made.

Straggling delegates will leave on almost every train bound for Philadelphia to day. A number of delegates from the New England states also went by the 7 o'clock train. The delegates appeared to be unanimous in their opposition to O'Donovan Rossa and the dynamite party appearing in the convention. At Philadelphia

Great as is our disappointment, we could not ask him to forsake his post of duty. Though he is not here, we have to direct our labors the plan approved by him of the National League in Ireland. This, together with many forcible expressions of his views that have from time to time reached us, will enable us still to work under his guidance. Then, too, we have to aid us, by wise counsels, Patrick Eagan, the worker and organizer, hardly second in importance to Parnell himself in the successes already achieved. Public opportunity is thus given us to testify our admiration for the integrity and ability with which he discharged his difficult duties in the care and disbursement of the fund in which John Bull takes so lively an interest. It is too late now to say words port and least embarrass him. It is our of welcome to our honored guest, since so many of his fellow-countrymen have reform, local self-government, extension alread tendered him their heartfelt greet The short year that has passed since our startling events. The affairs of Ireland have so occupied the world's attention, that those of other nations have almost seemed to stand still, while their peoples listened to her pathetic history. Nothing that malice could invent has been left unsaid, no effort has been spared to belittle her cause and misrepresent her, but above all, to insult and discredit her champions. To America more than to all other nations has this industrious malignity addressed its greatest energy. If the object sought was to break the solid ranks of Irish American sympathizers, to discourage their faith in the leaders in Ireland, and thus dissuade them from further efforts of support, it has hopelessly, signally failed. It would take more Pigotts and Dixies than even England could bribe, to shrick her now worn out cry of "Stop Thief!" to make even one contributer to the Land League fund believe that Patrick Egan had ever misapplied a dollar of their sacred trust, to the care or which he so unselfish ly sacrificed his entire time, the comforts of his home, and the prosperity of his personal affairs. If the object sought by misrepresentation was to prejudice the outside Ameri can public, it has failed likewise. Notwithstanding that we have in some of our cities an insignificant number who would fall down to worship everything English, there is a large generous representative class of Americans, for whom one of the very ablest of American journalists thus forcibly speaks :

"Nevertheless, behind this squad of would-be cockneys, there is a great body of sincere, feeling and thoughtful men and women in America who take as little stock in Gladstone and Forster as their forefathers took in Pitt and the regency, repeating the Cromwellian policy, which, under all governments, Liberal and Tory, has prevailed over Ireland. These do not approve the murders of Cavendish and Burke; but they approve just as little the judicial and constabulary murders, for these are made the pretext, They see in that they had been unable to agree on a Mr. Parnell a cool, resolute and clear-headed man fighting against vast odds. They see in Mr. Gladstone a weak timeserver, who disgraces the name of Liberal. They see in the London press a sewer for the escape of English falsehood and mal ice, and in the entire course of events in Ireland a reiteration of the tragic story of the past, a story made up of incidents were going to flog him, caught Cuney thetic because they lack a Grattan to waist, and mounting a horse, tied the which are none the less feeling and paspeak them in prose, or a Moore to tell other end of the rope to the saddle and them in rhyme.'

Mistaking the views of the insignicant number of Auglo-Americans for the pub lie sentiment of our country, and misled misrepresents our government at the court of St. James, British stupidity has made itself ridiculous a few weeks since by its friendly remonstrance, sent out to our government at Washington, reprehensive of some recent expressions of Irish sympathy, that were not mild enough for pathy, that were not mild enough for murderer. delicate English ears. organization. We are here to day chiefly to re-organize upon the same basis as that upon which the new National League in Ireland stands. We shall have the great advantage of the advice and suggestions of one who helped to inaugurate that body. In it are joined together there, all who can lay any claim to patriotic feeling; priests and laymen, Catholic and Protestant. It is necessary for us to be affiliated with the new organ ization, that we may more effectively cooperate with our brethren in Ireland. How to make the change, will be for this con-

In Charles Stewart Parnell, the Irish people have a leader whose place in his tory will be a proud one. England has ratified their choice by calumny and hate. It is our desire to unite with the League he has established in Ireland, that we may strengthen and support him in the labors he has undertaken. Setting aside our personal views we must work ander his guidance in such a way as to best sup hope to see him win for Ireland, land law of the franchise, development of industrial interests, and if all these were won the day would surely dawn the brighter, for last assembling has been crowded with the realization of the hope that would spring up in every Irish heart, that under heaven's blessing he might still lead on to that best and highest goal of national independence.
