George CUTICURA and CUTICURA SOAP, the great skin | W. Williams, author of the "History of the Negro Race in America," and Prof. Richard T. Greener. The convention is to be held in September next at Washing. ton. The basis of representation is one delegate to every 25,000 of colored population, three delegates for every state where there are not less than 10,000 negroes, and one delegate for every other state. By this plan of apportionment the convention would consist of nearly three hundred members. Here is the interesting thing about the proposed convention: It is intended to be an organized expression of discontent with the political and social treatment of the colored people by their fellow citizens. The signers hold it to be "an undeniable and lamentable fact that the present con-rights, notwithstanding the laws passed by Congress. 4. His political rights are ignored. Six and a half millions of people are without representation in Congress. 5. The negro does not get his share of executive protection and encouragement. No fair-minded man, black or white, will deny that if these allegations are true it is time for united action on the part of the negroes of the thirty-eight states. They form about one eighth of the entire population of the country. Equal rights are guaranteed them by the constitution.

The laws are sufficient for the purpose. If these laws are systematically ignored or evaded, and the negroes kept out of full citizenship by a conspiracy of white officeholders, it is none too soon for an organized movement to secure just treatment. The colored people have a million and a quarter vootes; that fact lies behind any protest which they make.

toman News, April 15. Probably the most colossal statue yet ordered for the states has just been finished in the plaster form by an American sculptor at Florence, Mr. Larkin G. Mead. There are but two in America that can ever be compared with it, Greenough's Washington and his group of civilization which adorn the capital in Washington. Some idea of it may be obtained by a short description The subject is the Mississippi river, a large recumbent statue, not unlike in treatment to the Nile group in Rome. The figure is represented lean ing against a cluster of rocks whence springs the source of the father of waters, while as a support to the other arm is a broken paddle wheel caught in a snag, a not uncommon sight on that mighty river. At the base are represented in bas-relief the various objects characteristic of the stream during its long course, stern wheeler and side wheeler, sugar cane and crocodile, and its mineral wealth in the representation of a lead mine, while negroes are seen loading and unloading bales of cotton and tobacco and the sugar cane; crystals, too, are not forgotten while the giant right foot rests on a ledge of limestone, and in the right hand stalks of that great product of the Mississippi valley, Indian corn, are held, one mature, the other in the shock. A wreath composed of tobacco and cotton crowns the head of the colossus, while a fishing net Do You Believe It. is carelessly thrown across the base. WASHINGTON GOSSIP.

The President's Florida Excursion. Cor. N Y. World. The White House looks like itself once more, and the president's nose, which everybody knows is of the purest Gothic order, has recovered from its sunburned appearance by the judicious application of cold cream. The fish he caught and the alligators which Private Secretary Phillips slew have increased daily in size and number. The president is an honest man and gentleman, but he is subject to the nfirmities of nature and fishermen. When Fred Phillips first came home, the alligator was twelve feet long, now it is twenty-two feet long and growing rapidly. At first he shot the alligator in the eye while it was tied to a stake driven in a mud bank; now he had a fearful tussel with the saurian, during which time the monster churned the water with his tail, eaught Mr. Phillips' coat tails between his ideous teeth, bellowing meanwhile like a bull-that is, the alligator bellowed, not Mr. Phillips, who loaded and fired with great coolness and precision eighteen shots into the alligator's right eye. The president matches this with stories of 19 pound trout and black bass that fought like the devilfish. Everything the president tells he clinches by saying, "Didn't I, Phillips?" and Phillips laughs ha, ha! and everything Phillips tells he asks the president "Now didn't I, Mr. President?" and the president laughs ho, ho! The president proved conclusively that fishing and religion are not incompatible, as he went to church three times every Sunday and made Fred go to, much to that young gentleman's disgust. As for Mr. Chandler, he has but little to say; he does not know how to amuse himself in the generally accepted sense, and is only too happy to get back to jobbing and wire pulling, and the other congenial pursuits which he follows in the navy department. It is seriously said that that the president was received with a good deal of indifference wherever he went at the South, but what did he expect when he took William E. Chandler along as a traveling companion? The number of honest men in Florida who could be found willing to shake the president's hand, accompanied with the obligation of shaking Mr. William E. Chandler's hand, would take that old classic fellow who went prowling around with a lantern to find. When the president goes in good company he will be treated with the respectful attention to which he is justly entitled, but when he takes a man so vulgar and so unsavory as his secretatary of the navy he need not be surprised that Persons let him severely alone. most universally condemned man in the country, and who is the butt of the choicest ridicule and sarcasm which the newspapers of the country can command in his annual address sometime ago to the Republican league of Berks county, used the following language: "If there is anything absurd in politics it is credited to Borks county." In the light of recent events it seems that he spoke more truth-fully than he thought. The president and the civil service commissioners evidently regarded the chief examinership as something absurd in polities, so they credited the appointment to Berks county, and themselves. If the Washington conven- as Mr. Keim was the only politician from that locality at large around Washington they kindly took him in. The whole country at once recognized the absurdity of the thing, and the favored son of Berks had to wait but a short time to see his words confirmed. Mr. Keim further said on the occasion referred to: " The the negro to the Republican party, the world looks upon us as an ignorant, uncul-party which now throws him overboard, tivated and slavish people, with so little manhood and independence that we follow stood in the way of his advancement. It from year to year in the footsteps of a forgotten age, in political intelligence and principles." This is very sweeping and crushing, and very humbling to the pride of Old Berks, and if, in addition to this, we had to bear the brunt of Keim's present appointment, we would never dare to hold up our heads again; but whatever else Berks may have done, however ignorant and uncultivated it may be, we do not think it would ever have been guilty in a much better condition, and the people of appointing or recommending for at large are sick of both. Why should the appointment Mr. Keim, either to the civil service examinership or to any other office. It would never have taken such a fearful responsibility. And yet Berks does not know Keim as well as he is known in Washington. We think, therefore, that Berks, notwithstanding the alleged ignorance and slavishness, attributed to it by Mr. Keim, may fairly claim credit for more horse sense and a more accurate knowledge of men than is provalent in Washington. When Keim first burst upon us with his scheme, to reform the postoflices, it took the people of Berks just about three weeks to size him up and assign him to his proper place, but it seems the politicians of Washington, after an experience and an acquaintance of years, have been unable to do so. He is one absurdity in politics, which we think ought not in fairness to be credited to Berks county. We humbly but firmly decline to assume any of the responsibility for his appointment.
