FOUND GUILTY.

THE JURY CONVICT MAJOR PHIPPS

Phipps Cool and Collected, but Anxious Looking-The Jury Standing 11 to 1 for Conviction from the Start.

In the trial of Phipps, the almshouse manager, in Philadelphia, on Saturday, as the word "guilty" fell from the foreman's lips the prisoner sat unmoved. No sign indicative of inward feeling was manifest upon his countenance, while on the contrary, the faces of those around him betrayed unmistakable evidences of surprise. As a matter of fact nine out of every ten persons in the large audience expected a verdict of acquittal, or at the most a disagreement. None looked for conviction. A subdued buzz of excitement followed the verdict.

This, however, was quickly silenced, as James H. Heverin, one of Major Phipps' counsel, asked that the jury be polled. In accordance with the request each juror answered to the call of his name, thus certifying to the announcement of the foreman. That done Counselor Heverin moved for a new trial, and at the same time appealed for arrest of judgment. This was necessary as a matter of legal techni-cality to prevent sentence being imposed, at least until the motion for a new trial had been made. District Attorney Graham offered no opposition to the motions.

"Very well," responded Judge Allison,
"I will give the counsel for the defense four cays in which to file their reasons." Major Phipps was then taken back to prison and the jury discharged. In the event of the refusal of a new trial, Major Phipps' counsel will take an appeal to the supreme court, provided that tribunal will grant a special allocutur, which must first be obtained before a writ of error can be be obtained before a writ of error can be taken. The main reason given by Mr. Heverin for the motion for a new trial is that no evidence was adduced to show that the stub receipt was signed before the 17th of August, the date of the payment of the $389. This, of course, comprises the whole point in the case. Mr. Heverin emphatically declared on Saturday, after the verdict, that Phipps did not commit the forgery. "The man who did it," he added, "has made a confession to the major's attorneys, but he is now beyond major's attorneys, but he is now beyond the jurisdiction of Pennsylvania justice.

We did not mention the fact during the trial for prudential reasons."

concerning the manner in which the jury | vertised to let in the morning papers, and came to an agreement. One story related talked about hiring it for the summer. that immediately after the jury retired it Bronk telegraphed to Bernhard, in New was discovered without balloting that York, to be at the ferry. He then took eleven were for conviction and one for acquittal. The twelfth man, so the story Bernhard at the Battery. The Marriotts ward, Council Rowan's section, and was influenced politically to vote for the prisoner's acquittal. Another rumor de clared the solitary juror to be a relative of Cooke, of 1341 Vine street. He is an old white haired man, of very strong couvic tions. Immediately upon being discharged he proceeded with the other jurors to the county commissioners' office to get cartificates for their fees. While there Cooke openly declared that he was the only man in the jury who was at all inclined to acquit Major Phipps. He even went so far as to tell George Biles, the office messenger, that he thought the prisoner guilty mutil he had heard the evidence, then his views underwent a change. Cooke further said to Biles that when the jury retired he was fully converted to the belief that Phipps was innecent, but finding that he could make no impression upon the minds of the other cleven, all of whom were for conviction, he finally went over to them.

Cooke's Explanation. Later in the day Cooke was questioned by a Press reporter. "When I was sworn in as juror in the Phipps case," he said, I had a general idea that he was a guilty nan. I had formed this impression, not upon the question of the forgery, for I knew nothing about that, but upon his administration of the almshouse affairs generally. When I entered the case I de termined to give the prisoner the benefit of any doubt that might arise, for I saw at the outset of the trial that my eleven colleagues in the jury box had already made up their minds to convict him. Up to the time when Phipps went on the stand I thought him innocent, but when he whatever among us. We could just as well have returned a verdict then as this morning. I simply told the others in plain terms that I knew they had made up heir minds early in the trial to convict the prisoner, and they did not deny it. of small diamond study, lady's watch and Nothing more was said or done until the chain, two jeweled bracelets, one gold morning after breakfast, when, as a mat-ter of legal form, we took a ballot, and all voted for conviction. I went on that jury determined to do my duty, and I did it. I tried to get some hold upon which to fight for acquittal, but I could find Cooke's statement is borne out by that of John Lowrie, another of the jurors. Lowrie told Assistant District Attorney Bregy yesterday that the jury only took one ballot, which resulted unanimously for conviction. During the trial the evidence was canvassed and, with but one exception, the opinion of the jury was adverse to the prisoner. "That one jury-man," added Lowrie, "refused to express an opinion until the judge delivered his charge. Then he came to the conclusion that Phipps was guilty."

Is He a Scape-goat. The counsel for the defense are at pains to verify the rumor which prevailed suc ceding the trial to the effect that the warrant in evidence, and in question was not in reality signed by Phipps, as alleged, but his guilt. James H. Heverin said to a Press reporter : "Phipps did not sign that warrant. It was signed by a man who does not live in the city, but who was a close and intimate and unable to tell who her assassin was. friend of Phipps. It came about in this way: This man's father, who is now living necessarily fatal, and, though she is still in the city, lent Phipps a large sum of alive, she will probably die. There is no money. When he saw the crash coming, clue to the murderer, but every effort is his son went and signed the warrant, and being made to find him. No reason can thus made good his father's leans. I am be assigned for the deed, as Miss Gavoille not at liberty to reveal his name. Before was not known to have any enemies, but Phipps was put on trial he wrote it is rumored, however, that the tragedy is to a friend of the ex-superintendent of the almshouse, saying that it was he who signed the warrant, and he would come on and confess and save Phipps. STOLEN DIAMONDS RECAPTURED.

A Woman Who Fled with the Thief Gives N. Y_Sun of Sunday.

The desk in front of the sergeant at the Thirtieth street police station glittered with big diamonds last evening. One large white stone weighed 36 carats, was more than three-quarters of an inch through and was valued at over $50,000. The jewels had been recovered from a thief who had stolen them in Paris. On March 7 last diamond jewelry valued at $75,000 was stolen from Franz Kramer. jeweller, 350 Rue St. Honore, Paris. It is described as a necklace, with two rows of brilliants and the 36-carat pendant, two earrings, each carrying a 31-carat stone, and 16 smaller diamonds, weighing 74 carats. The theft was quickly traced to Henry James Marriett, a clerk in the picture. ture store of Durand Ruel, 1 Rue de la Paix. It was found that he had left Paris secretly with Marie, alias Jeanne, Pereux, pretty blonde dressmaker, 19 years old.

Mr. Kramer, who is a German, appealed to the German ambassador at Paris. It was thought that the fugitives would was thought that the fugitives would come to this country, and the German ambassador telegraphed a description of them to Solomon & Dulong, lawyers of 117 Broadway, who are the counsel in this city of the German government. They put the case in the hands of United States Deputy Marshal Bernhard, and he searched every incoming steamer. Soon afterward portraits of both of the fugitives were forwarded from Paris, and with these the marshal continued his search. On April 12 the steamer Pennland of the Red Star line arrived from Autwerp. A French steamer and other vessels came A French steamer and other vessels came in the same day, and Marshal Bernhard searched them before he went to the Pennland. When he reached her he found that all the passengers had disembarked. Among them had been two who answered the description of Marriott and Mario Persuy. Barnhard heliaving that Marie Pereux. Bernhard, believing that they would remain in New York to dispose of the big diamonds, left word with Inspector Newton at the general post office to look out for any person giving the name Marriott and follow him or her.

Yesterday, at 1:45 o'clock, a handsome young woman asked at the foreign window for letters for Jeanne Marriott. Policeman added, "has made a confession to the major's attorneys, but he is now beyond the jurisdiction of Pennsylvania justice. We did not mention the fact during the trial for prudential reasons."

A YOUNG WOMAN ASSASSINATED.

The Terrible Fate of a Giri Who was Walt-ing Through a Woods.

Miss Louisa Gavoille, daughter of Jos. Gavoille, of Dingman township, Pike county, and her mother left their home on Thursday afternoon. Mrs. Gavoille was going to a neighbor's house to visit and her daughter, after accompanying her part of the way, was to return home. After leaving her mother the young girl started back home. About one mile from her home she was obliged to pass through a piece of woods. While walking through the thicket a man suddenly stepped out from the side of the road, raised a gun and fired at her three times, and then ran away. She tried to get home, but, after tottering a few rods, fell helpless to the ground.

Her brother missed her Friday morn ing, and, thinking he would find her at by another person, who has since confessed her sister's house in Milford, started in search of her. Not finding her, a hunt was made and the poor girl was found lying near the spot where the shooting
