THE DIAGNOTHIANS.

A VERY PLEASANT ANNIVERSART The rorty-eighth Celebration of the Found ing of the Society-Fine Speaking and a Crowded House. The forty-eighth anniversary of the Diagnothian literary society of Franklin and Marshall college was held in Fulton opera house last evening. The audience was an exceedingly large and brilliant one the hall being crowded. The stage was prettily and modestly decorated with lowers and plants. From the front of the stage at the top depended on either side a large globe composed of a varied number of very bandsome natural flowers. From the centre of the flies at the front were suspended magnificent floral letters. D. L. S."-"Diagnothian Literary Society"-of large size. At the back of the stage were a number of very beautiful growing plants and flowers, ferns and other varieties of the floral world. At 8 o'clock the speakers of the evening with the professors of the college filed into the hall and took seats upon the stage to the strains of a march—"Marien Blumshen." Rev. Sylvanus Stall, pastor of St. John's Lutheran church, delivered a prayer, after which the first speaker was

The speaker welcomed the audience m words of sincere salutation, and re marked that while he would make the welcome general as well as cordial, gallanti y demanded that he should say that to none does the society feel more highly honored in extending an especial welcome than to the fair ladies of Lancaster, and then, using an apt Scottish quotation, introduced by it his theme. Let us for a moment turn to Scotland and take a glimpse at the land of the "Thistle and Heather" which so greatly gained the love of her bards. Ascend to the giddy summit of you eminence and see, as far as the eye can reach, hill upon hill, as twere moving nearer and nearer. You will be overcome by the grandeur, and in the revelry imagine yourself in mid ocean. The orator then continued with a fine description of the beauty and sublimity of Scottish scenery everywhere in that land, with her percipitous crags presenting an impregnable defense for Scotia's warriors in times of danger. Nature herself defends her sons there as a mother doss her child. With all this in view can we wonder that Caledonia's bards are impressed with so great a love for their country? No other nation can rival Scotland in lyric man of intense honesty of purpose and had composition. The story of his private virtues is one on which the mind can gladly linger. As a man he was above reproach and above suspicion. Though he had been a successful lawyer and was long in public life, he never increased his income beyond his salary by seeking side avenues of remuneration, but preferred to give all that was not needed for the subsistence of charity. His goodness of heart is a proverb. He educated several negroes and provided generously for his former slaves. The negro race is lavish in praise of him and they unanimously place him among the foremost of their friends.
