

Lancaster Intelligencer.

SATURDAY EVENING, MAY 26, 1883.

A Poor Outcome.

The action of the Senate upon the railroad discrimination bill was no more than we expected, but that does not moderate the disgust with which we view it. The bill, as adopted, is about as ineffective as it could be made.

The first section of the bill as passed by the Senate says that undue discrimination in charges "is hereby declared to be unlawful." That declaration was unnecessary, as the constitution has long ago declared this to be unlawful.

Down in Botetourt county, Virginia, Judge Mayo has summoned to answer before him for contempt an editor who charged the judge with "corruptly and fraudulently packing the grand jury to secure an indictment of citizens."

When the Pittsburgh Times talks about Young-Man-Who-Has-Made-an-Ass-of-Himself it refers to Freddie Gebhardt. The Philadelphia Times is right in saying that it never claimed the $30 "cable letters" as special to itself.

There ought to be no real contention in the Legislature over the proposition to close the soldiers' orphan schools in 1885. By that time the war will have been over twenty years; the last child born within four years after its termination will have reached the age at which they leave these schools, and there will be no pretext for continuing them.

THERE will be no reasonable complaint against the propriety of Governor Pattison's veto of the bill to pension Mexican soldiers and their widows by the state. There has been a persistent effort to have this proposition enacted into a law, and twice before it passed the Legislature only to be vetoed by Governor Hoyt, for such incontrovertible reasons that its authors might have reasonably supposed would occur to any other intelligent executive.

It is not founded upon considerations of charity, for the opulent as well as the needy, are made the recipients of its bounty. It is not intended to compensate for suffering or injury caused by military service, for the healthful and vigorous as well as the wounded and disabled share in its benevolence.

The Examiner pronounces it "true as preaching" that "Mr. Samuel J. Tilden was in 1876, in all the forms of the existing law, elected president of the United States. Even his enemies and those who connived at the robbery of the people now admit the fact.

Down in Botetourt county, Virginia, Judge Mayo has summoned to answer before him for contempt an editor who charged the judge with "corruptly and fraudulently packing the grand jury to secure an indictment of citizens."

When the Pittsburgh Times talks about Young-Man-Who-Has-Made-an-Ass-of-Himself it refers to Freddie Gebhardt. The Philadelphia Times is right in saying that it never claimed the $30 "cable letters" as special to itself.

There seems to be a general confidence that a union of the Presbyterian church North and South is only a question of time, but the Independent predicts that the separation of the colored brethren in the South may be a stumbling block.

There ought to be no real contention in the Legislature over the proposition to close the soldiers' orphan schools in 1885. By that time the war will have been over twenty years; the last child born within four years after its termination will have reached the age at which they leave these schools, and there will be no pretext for continuing them.

York and Brooklyn bridge at present may be largely ascribed to motives of curiosity and slight seeing. But the estimated number of 6,000 foot passengers per hour affords sufficient margin to demonstrate that the utility and necessity of the bridge will be satisfactorily established from the start.

The stern wheel steamer Pilot, which blew up yesterday morning, has been running for some years past in opposition to steamers of the San Francisco & North Pacific railroad company. The explosion occurred near Lakeville, a mile above Donabue Landing, on an arm of the bay known as Petaluma creek.

Officers of the steamer Donabue report that the Pilot was blown up by a boiler explosion. The Pilot was a fine vessel, and was carrying a large number of passengers and crew.

PLON PLON'S bill board manifesto, which months ago scared Franco and set the world in a roar, have not lost their effect yet. Commemorative placards were yesterday posted in Paris calling upon the people to assemble at the graves of the revolutionists in the cemetery of Pere la Chaise to-morrow.

Down in Botetourt county, Virginia, Judge Mayo has summoned to answer before him for contempt an editor who charged the judge with "corruptly and fraudulently packing the grand jury to secure an indictment of citizens."

When the Pittsburgh Times talks about Young-Man-Who-Has-Made-an-Ass-of-Himself it refers to Freddie Gebhardt. The Philadelphia Times is right in saying that it never claimed the $30 "cable letters" as special to itself.

There seems to be a general confidence that a union of the Presbyterian church North and South is only a question of time, but the Independent predicts that the separation of the colored brethren in the South may be a stumbling block.

There ought to be no real contention in the Legislature over the proposition to close the soldiers' orphan schools in 1885. By that time the war will have been over twenty years; the last child born within four years after its termination will have reached the age at which they leave these schools, and there will be no pretext for continuing them.

There ought to be no real contention in the Legislature over the proposition to close the soldiers' orphan schools in 1885. By that time the war will have been over twenty years; the last child born within four years after its termination will have reached the age at which they leave these schools, and there will be no pretext for continuing them.

STEAMBOAT EXPLOSION.

THE LOSS OF EIGHTEEN LIVES. A Mother Lost Her Baby Saved—A Terrible Accident—Other Recent Disasters.

The stern wheel steamer Pilot, which blew up yesterday morning, has been running for some years past in opposition to steamers of the San Francisco & North Pacific railroad company. The explosion occurred near Lakeville, a mile above Donabue Landing, on an arm of the bay known as Petaluma creek.

Officers of the steamer Donabue report that the Pilot was blown up by a boiler explosion. The Pilot was a fine vessel, and was carrying a large number of passengers and crew.

PLON PLON'S bill board manifesto, which months ago scared Franco and set the world in a roar, have not lost their effect yet. Commemorative placards were yesterday posted in Paris calling upon the people to assemble at the graves of the revolutionists in the cemetery of Pere la Chaise to-morrow.

Down in Botetourt county, Virginia, Judge Mayo has summoned to answer before him for contempt an editor who charged the judge with "corruptly and fraudulently packing the grand jury to secure an indictment of citizens."

When the Pittsburgh Times talks about Young-Man-Who-Has-Made-an-Ass-of-Himself it refers to Freddie Gebhardt. The Philadelphia Times is right in saying that it never claimed the $30 "cable letters" as special to itself.

There seems to be a general confidence that a union of the Presbyterian church North and South is only a question of time, but the Independent predicts that the separation of the colored brethren in the South may be a stumbling block.

There ought to be no real contention in the Legislature over the proposition to close the soldiers' orphan schools in 1885. By that time the war will have been over twenty years; the last child born within four years after its termination will have reached the age at which they leave these schools, and there will be no pretext for continuing them.

There ought to be no real contention in the Legislature over the proposition to close the soldiers' orphan schools in 1885. By that time the war will have been over twenty years; the last child born within four years after its termination will have reached the age at which they leave these schools, and there will be no pretext for continuing them.

THE CHURCHES.

THE PRESBYTERIANS IN COUNCIL. The Synod Assembly Meets Reports on Church Extension and Southern Relations.

In the Presbyterian general assembly held in Louisville, Ky., Friday morning, the Synod Assembly met to report on church extension and southern relations.

The Synod Assembly met to report on church extension and southern relations. The committee on church extension reported that they had held several meetings in various parts of the synod.

Down in Botetourt county, Virginia, Judge Mayo has summoned to answer before him for contempt an editor who charged the judge with "corruptly and fraudulently packing the grand jury to secure an indictment of citizens."

When the Pittsburgh Times talks about Young-Man-Who-Has-Made-an-Ass-of-Himself it refers to Freddie Gebhardt. The Philadelphia Times is right in saying that it never claimed the $30 "cable letters" as special to itself.

There seems to be a general confidence that a union of the Presbyterian church North and South is only a question of time, but the Independent predicts that the separation of the colored brethren in the South may be a stumbling block.

There ought to be no real contention in the Legislature over the proposition to close the soldiers' orphan schools in 1885. By that time the war will have been over twenty years; the last child born within four years after its termination will have reached the age at which they leave these schools, and there will be no pretext for continuing them.

There ought to be no real contention in the Legislature over the proposition to close the soldiers' orphan schools in 1885. By that time the war will have been over twenty years; the last child born within four years after its termination will have reached the age at which they leave these schools, and there will be no pretext for continuing them.

There ought to be no real contention in the Legislature over the proposition to close the soldiers' orphan schools in 1885. By that time the war will have been over twenty years; the last child born within four years after its termination will have reached the age at which they leave these schools, and there will be no pretext for continuing them.

THIS MORNING'S COURT.

THE CURRENT BUSINESS TRANSACTIONS. Court met at 9 o'clock this morning for the transaction of current business.

Adeline S. Shissler, of Manheim township, was given the benefit of the act of 1872, giving married women the benefit of their own separate earnings.

Down in Botetourt county, Virginia, Judge Mayo has summoned to answer before him for contempt an editor who charged the judge with "corruptly and fraudulently packing the grand jury to secure an indictment of citizens."

When the Pittsburgh Times talks about Young-Man-Who-Has-Made-an-Ass-of-Himself it refers to Freddie Gebhardt. The Philadelphia Times is right in saying that it never claimed the $30 "cable letters" as special to itself.

There seems to be a general confidence that a union of the Presbyterian church North and South is only a question of time, but the Independent predicts that the separation of the colored brethren in the South may be a stumbling block.

There ought to be no real contention in the Legislature over the proposition to close the soldiers' orphan schools in 1885. By that time the war will have been over twenty years; the last child born within four years after its termination will have reached the age at which they leave these schools, and there will be no pretext for continuing them.

There ought to be no real contention in the Legislature over the proposition to close the soldiers' orphan schools in 1885. By that time the war will have been over twenty years; the last child born within four years after its termination will have reached the age at which they leave these schools, and there will be no pretext for continuing them.

There ought to be no real contention in the Legislature over the proposition to close the soldiers' orphan schools in 1885. By that time the war will have been over twenty years; the last child born within four years after its termination will have reached the age at which they leave these schools, and there will be no pretext for continuing them.

There ought to be no real contention in the Legislature over the proposition to close the soldiers' orphan schools in 1885. By that time the war will have been over twenty years; the last child born within four years after its termination will have reached the age at which they leave these schools, and there will be no pretext for continuing them.

A WOMAN'S BURLESQUE BLOW.

THE HOODY END OF A COCK-FIGHT IN THE EAST REGION. Centra and the adjoining towns are excited over a desperate affray.

Centra and the adjoining towns are excited over a desperate affray. Two chicken-fanciers, named Mike Cleary and Edward Dillon, had arranged for a cock-fight near Lexington, Ky., this morning.

Down in Botetourt county, Virginia, Judge Mayo has summoned to answer before him for contempt an editor who charged the judge with "corruptly and fraudulently packing the grand jury to secure an indictment of citizens."

When the Pittsburgh Times talks about Young-Man-Who-Has-Made-an-Ass-of-Himself it refers to Freddie Gebhardt. The Philadelphia Times is right in saying that it never claimed the $30 "cable letters" as special to itself.

There seems to be a general confidence that a union of the Presbyterian church North and South is only a question of time, but the Independent predicts that the separation of the colored brethren in the South may be a stumbling block.

There ought to be no real contention in the Legislature over the proposition to close the soldiers' orphan schools in 1885. By that time the war will have been over twenty years; the last child born within four years after its termination will have reached the age at which they leave these schools, and there will be no pretext for continuing them.

There ought to be no real contention in the Legislature over the proposition to close the soldiers' orphan schools in 1885. By that time the war will have been over twenty years; the last child born within four years after its termination will have reached the age at which they leave these schools, and there will be no pretext for continuing them.

There ought to be no real contention in the Legislature over the proposition to close the soldiers' orphan schools in 1885. By that time the war will have been over twenty years; the last child born within four years after its termination will have reached the age at which they leave these schools, and there will be no pretext for continuing them.

There ought to be no real contention in the Legislature over the proposition to close the soldiers' orphan schools in 1885. By that time the war will have been over twenty years; the last child born within four years after its termination will have reached the age at which they leave these schools, and there will be no pretext for continuing them.