THE "PAGE."

ITS TWENTY-EIGHTA ANNIVERSARY

A Large Assemblage-An Animated Scene-Dr Lverett's Lecture Before the Society.

With perhaps more than the usual ac tivity and eagerness to attend another anniversary of the literary societies of Millersville normal school, a great crowd collected at the buildings, and soon thronged the chapel last evening to wit ness the celebration of the twenty-eighth anniversary of the Page literary society. Many citizens were in attendance from Lancaster, the street cars being overflowed, while others, of no small number, took advantage of the occasion to enjoy a more delightful time by using their private conveyances. The balmy air, the beautiful scenery along the road and the fine stretches of nature's pictures in the distance made the trip, even to those packed into the street cars like sardines in a box, a most enjoyable one. Before the commencement of the exercises a great crowd of young gentlemen and pretty girl students, and other pretty girls as well, made an animated and handsome picture as they strolled over the fine campus and speculated upon the successes of the anni versary, and wondered why in the world that horrid Legislature couldn't stop its noise just one night and let the previously expected senators lend, if possible, dignity and attractiveness to the occasion by their handsome presences. The chapel began filling up long ere the hour of commencement and before that time had come was completely filled, standing room being at more than a premium.

Promptly at eight o'clock the members of the Page society filed into the chapel and took the seats reserved for them up front, with the society's color-blue-in conspicuous position. The red badge of the Normal was also seen with good effect, all the generous rivalry of the two capable organizations having vanished, as on all these occasions, and left instead most reciprocative wishes of success.

Opening Exercises. The president, Mr. Isaac S. Geist, of Marietta, and the secretary, Miss Elizabeth Gilbert, of Norristown, took their seats on the platform, on a table on which were placed several baskets of handsome flowers, to the strains of a selection of music rendered by Taylor's orchestra. Rev. J. M. Wheeler, Millersville, de livered a prayer, and the president then gave the salutatory address. The speaker began by saying that the occasion of this anniversary calls forth nemories fraught with many pleasant feelings. He then spoke of the incipiency of the Page society more than a quarter of a century ago. He traced briefly the early struggles of the organization, and mentioned the many members who have gone out from the school and have become bright lights in the varied vocations of life. He then extended a hearty welcome to the sister society, the audience and to

Jesse H. Michener, Ashland, Pa. Taking the nations as one we lose the Political economists present the world as a balance sheet of stocks and wealth. This generalization that gains and losses are being equaled seems to be a philoso phical deduction. What persons gain or lose may make no gain or loss to the state, but does it not make a loss to the individual? The truth is, society has had an absolute loss in every individual who does not do as he can. Is not self conquest the looked for. great conquest of life, and is it not in accordance with that divine command. know thyself? What ever evil one may do, it is not done alone to himself. Preach ing from the housetops may benefit the world if one is consecrated to the work, but it is well to discover whether it is well for self. We must aid to soothe and heal. The most generous life gains most of what is good. The speaker then noted instances of great men who had done great achievement as individuals. This idea of individuality is the idea of republican government Such a government is a well founded one. Political misdoings were made a subject of thought, and on which the speaker remarked that we do wrong to blame the party for corruption; it is the fault always of the individuals. In the school system that which provides for one and all is the best, The work of the old school teacher was not wrong; he taught as an individual. Yet all are not of equal rank. Command has been given to some, but not to all. Franklin, Byron, Mahomet, who gave impetus of wealth to their people, were instances as men who were individuals to command. The concentration of wealth making grasping monopolies was then scored by the speaker, who thought that corporations were not wholly inimical to the good of the government, but they can go too far and intringe on the rights of the people. by Killhefer. Dr. Everett's Address. Honorary address-"Men who win."

Rev. Dr. T. T. Everett -The speaker, by way of introduction, remarked that men-

and "those who win"-is a subject in which the fair will no doubt take the deepest interest. The speaker first showed how that with all the seeming perfection of the creations of man in this world, there is always something to the con A forest of white and trary. A forest of white and beautiful pinnacles greet the beholder, who finds himself gazing at the cathedral at Milan; it is a grand and noble sight, and yet with all this there are many sad features about it. The shipping at Liverpool has become of wonderful extent, | prevails there to some extent. They will and presents a varied and multifarious ap- probably bed scharged by order of court er pearance—yet Liverpool mourns because she has not built her docks larger. The work for women to do. reverend gentleman cited several intances of human creations which, seeming without the lack of any feature to make them more perfect, yet there are plenty of places in them to criticise. One great thing to be regretted is that we are all too much like the man who once invented a friend to try it on, who in a short time found his hair caught in its wheels and taken completely off his head He was one of those visionary people who think of performing the most impossible things. Yet it must be remembered that those who have achieved success have at first been called visionaries. Those individuals who have ders have all been put under the term Glinn on the charge of forestalling the visionaries at the start. But the deep and market. All the defendants are grocers, COMMANDERY FLAGS AND BANNERS grand things of the world are not conceived and effected by the idle brains of sluggards. They have been secured by those who have been hard working, and assiduous; they are the men who have started low down and have pushed their way forward into potency and renown. The speaker then showed how the world's celebrities have achieved great success and honors by persistent labor, and after coming from the lowest positions. Many of the successful men whom we read about were very stupid in their youth, and who showed no precocity whatever. The ques-tion is, how did these dunces win success?

Why, easy enough. The time came when they abandoned their stupid ways, while the only great mis-take such men ever made was that they did not take this step earlier. Many amusing anecdotes of much interest were told by the speaker to show from what lowly positions great men have and will come. He once saw standing at a at court. window of the Press building in Philadel. As will phia the late Col. Forney and a United States senator. They were looking down into the crowded street below and the senator, turning to Forney, suddenly asked

Where are the leaders of our country to come from ?" and the genial Forney. without a moment's thought, replied "Why, out of the mud." Forney was right, said the speaker. The world nowadays rings with the applause of men whose childhoods are enveloped in poverty and ignorance. Cooper, Vanderbilt, Gould, Charles O'Connor, James Watson, Webb and Dr. John Hall all came into prominence and honor without the advantages the youth of to day possess. Cyrus Field and Asa Packer, whose name has become synonymous of honesty and integrity, the speaker said, were instanced as such. Mr. Everett's lecture abounded in fine anecdotes illustrative of the success. es of strong and persistent individuals, and was fall of thought and of much in terest. He closed amid great applause. The Meeting in New York and Tournamen Fourteen members of the Marietta Wheel club will arrive here by train or bicycle this evening and will leave at 12:40 for New York to take part in the national convention of wheelmen. Very few members, if any, will attend the meeting from this city. The tournament is growing in importance as the day which is to decide approaches. It is expected that there will be at least one hundred bicycles in the grand parade through the streets of Lancaster and on the track, and the prize medals will be contested for by a large number of wheelmen. The medals have been received and are very handsome and valuable. All of them are of pure gold treet, Lancaster. and of artistic design.

Dark Drunken Disorderlies. A drunken spree occurred among the colored people residing in the vicinity of Lemon and Water streets, last evening, which resulted in the arrest of several of them. They had a hearing before Alderman Samson this morning, and Clara Smith was committed for 30 days, Maze Taylor for 30 days, to the county jail, and Amanda Taylor and Sallie Diggs were discharged on payment of costs. Some doubt is expressed as to what is to become of those committed to jail, as the smallpox

Joseph Neff, a well known resident of Millersville, died at his home in that vil lage last evening, after a year's sickness, aged 76 years. He was highly esteemed by all who were acquainted with him. His funeral will take place to morrow afternoon at 1 o'clock. Interment at the Millersville burying ground near Millers.

Jonas B. Good and Jacob B Good had a hearing this morning before Alderman McConomy on the charge of forcibly entering and taking possession of property belonging to Thomas Baumgardner. They were committed in default of bail for trial

As will be seen elsewhere the recognizances of the above defendants, George Shoff and Benjamin Good, who are held for court on another charge of the same kind, were forfeited in court this morning. George Shoff and Jacob and Jonas Good were arrested at the hearing. Shofl gave bail, but the others are in the station

A False Report. A great deal of excitement was caused n the western part of town by a report that a woman, who was traveling with an organ grinder, had killed her baby and was carrying the dead body around. Officer Winower was informed of the affair and he followed and overtook the woman. He then discovered that all was untrue and that the child was alive and well. The woman said she lived on South Queen street, but she is known to be the wife of a well-known tramp and is very much attached to the child with her.
