TROM THE OLD WORLD.

From the great London (Eng.) Times. Among the many specifies introduced to the public for the cure of dyspepsia, indigestion, derangements of various kinds, and as a general family medicine, none have met with such genuine appreciation as Hop Litters. Introduced to this country but a comparatively short time since, to meet the great demand for a pure, safe and perfect family medicine, they have rapidly increased in favor, until they are, without question, the most popular and valuable medicine known. Its world-wide renown is not due to the advertising it has received: is not due to the advertising it has received; it is famous by reason of its inherent virtues. It does all that is claimed for it. It discharges It does all that is claimed for it. It discharges its curative powers without any of the evil effects of other bitters or medicine, being perfectly safe and harmless for the most trail woman, smallest child, and weakest invalid to use. Few are the homes indeed where the great discovery has not already been halled as a deliverer and welcomed as a triend. It does what others affect to do. Composed of simple materials, it is a marvel of delicate and successful combination. Nothing is wanting. Every ingredient goes statight to the mark at which it is aimed, and never fails. Pleasant to the palate, agreeable to the stomach, and thorthe palate, agreeable to the stomach, and thoroughly effective as a cure, it has won for itself the confidence of all.—Times, London, Eng. I have tried experiments on myseif and others with Hop Bitters and can easily recommend them as a pleasant and efficacious medicine. I have found them specially useful in cases of congestion of the kidneys, as well as in bilious derangement. Rev. J. Milner, M. A. Rector to the Duke of Edinburgh.

England. In the year 1128, the head of this new and strange society, which had excited much notice among the pious and warlike of England, arrived in London to explain its objects. He narrated to King Henry 1, and his Court the origin and progress of the order,—how he himself and eight other Knights, calling themselves. poor fellow-soldiers of Jesus Christ' entered into a solemn compact to devote their lives and fortunes to the Christian pilgrims to Jerusalem, by the defence of the highway from the inroads of the Musselmans, and the the ravages of the numerous robbers who infested it. They en larged their object to the defense of the Christian Kindom of Jerusalem itself. Hugh de Payers was made Master, and set out from Jerusalem with four brethren he returned after his visit to England, with 300, chosen principally from the noblest families of France and England. But Matthew Paris tells us they at first

Before Hugh de Payens left England, he placed a Kuight Templar called the Prior of the Temple, at the head of the Society in this country, to manage the estates and aflairs of the Order. Numerous Templar establishments now sprung up, the chief of which was in Holbern, where Southampton House was afterwards erected, and a hall of which existed to our day, with traces of an ancient circular chapel. As the English Knights increased in number and wealth, they purchased the site of the present l'emple, in the rear of the south side of

Fleet street, and set about creeting their magnificent round church, after the model of that at Jerusalem. Meanwhile, the misfortunes of the Templars in Palestine brought to Europe for assistance Heraclius, the patriarch, the Master of the Temple, and the Master of St. John's. Now, Henry II, promised them assistance, on receiving absolution for the murder of Becket. The Master of the Temple died on the way, the other two reached Eng. land in 1185. King Henry met them at

To this he consented, as recorded in an inscription; and at the same time consecrated the church of the rival society of Hospitallers, or Knights of St John, at Clerkenwell. Heractias' de mands for succor were, however, evaded by the king and his parlia nest, and the patrach's mission altogether failed.

before the erection of their palace on the Thames.

In this new temple, "out of the city and the noise thereof, and in the suburbs," between the king's court at Westminster and the city of Londou, the studious lawyers, lived in quiet, increasing in number and importance; so that although the meth of West Tutter's reliablish plund. the mob of Wat Tyler's rebellion plundered the students, and destroyed almost all their books and records ("To the inns of court ! down with them al! !" This was done in the sixth year of James I; and cue a laborer who was overcome by gas the two temples were granted as the while digging a well. He also was over-Inner and Middle. Thus, for nearly five come. Mrs. Vandenbaugh, who was on centaries, some of the leading practisers the ground, urged the other workmen to

This winged horse, with the motto "Volat ad athera virtus," was substitu-ted by the Inner Temple for the Holy Lamb early in the reign of Elizabeth. There has been much amusing speculation upon the cause of the change; it is thought to have been intended to signify -in allusion to the fable of Pegassus forming the fountain of Hippocreae by

It is divided into three aisles by clustered marbled columns, the ground roof being richly colored in arabesque and ornamented with holy emblems; white triple lancet headed windows let in floods of

It is mentioned in Dagdale's Monasticon that both King Henry II. and his Queen Eleanor directed that their bodies should bs interred within the walls of the Temple Church, and that the above monarch by his will left 500 marks for that purpose. The walls are inscribed with scripture texts in Latin; and between the top of the stalls and the string course between the windows is the hymn of St. Ambrose. The windows, by Willement, are among the finest specimens of modern stained glass the altar subjects are from the life of Christ, the interspaces being deep blue and ruby mesaic, with glittering borders; Knights Templar fill the aisle windows, but that opposite the organ has figures of angels playing musical instruments.

A brief history of the Templars in England and of this church may be read in the rude effigies of the successive kings during whose reigns they flourished, now painted on the west end of the chancel. At the south corner sits Henry I, hold the first banner of the Crusaders, half black, half white, entitled "Beauseant;" white typifying fairness towards friends; black, terror to foes. This banner was changed during the reign of Stephen for the red cross:

"And on his breast a bloodie cross he bore, Henry II. and the Round Church are represented by the third figure. Richard I. with the sword which he wielded as Crusader, and John, his brother, are the next kings; and in the north aisle is portrayed Heary III., holding the two churches; the chancel, or square part, having been added in his reign, and consecrated on Ascension

Among the rules for the government of the Order of Templars was that of obedi ence, for breach of which was the penitential cell; already mentioned; it was formed in the wall of the church, and measured only four and a half feet in length, and two and a half in breadth, so that the unhappy prisoner could not lie down, except by drawing his limbs together. Bicyclers from all parts of the country, from California to Maine, arrived in town to participate in the parade. The business meeting was held in the morning and was attended by over five hundred members of the league, who all appeared in uniform. N. M. Beckwith, of the Citizens' club, New York, was elected president for the ensuing year. The reports of the treasurer and corresponding secretary showed a prosperous financial condition of the organization and a large increase in membership. that fully 2,000 wheelmen took part in the parade. The column extended from 60th street to 76th street and presented an interesting spectacle as the wheelmen stood by their machines, clad in their picturesque uniforms, waiting for the word of command. The sound of the bugle gave warning and at the word "Mount" every man leaped upon his bicycle and the line of march was taken up in double file. The procession moved slowly down fifth avenue to 59th street, preceded by a detachment of mounted police. Here the procession counter wheeled and moved up Fifth avenue to One Hundred and Sixteenth street, through Seventh avenue, down the west side drive in Central Park to Fifty ninth street, back to Seventy-second street and to the riverside drive, where the wheelmen stacked their bicycles and were photographed in a group. The procession then disbanded. The route along which the procession passed was througed and the appearance of the wheelmen won much applause.
