STRIKING MINERS.

Men and Women in Conflict with the Soldiers - Scattered by Bullets - Two of the Miners Killed.

ST. LOUIS, May 29.—The strike of the Illinois miners culminated yesterday in rioting and bloodshed. About three hundred women, wives and daughters of the miners led the attack and with about one hundred and fifty strikers took complete possession of the city. The civil authorities were powerless, and the militia at East St. Louis were called upon and proceeded to Belleville. Upon their arrival there the mine was found to be in possession of the mob, five hundred strikers and about a hundred francs were seen. When the train stopped the mob took a position on the hill above the railroad. The sheriff addressed the strikers and urged them to disperse peacefully, but while he was speaking several shots were fired from the hill and a bullet whistled past his ear. The sheriff then drew his pistol and fired in the direction from which the shot had come. This was the signal for a general fusillade from the mob. The sheriff then ordered the troops to fire and a volley was poured into the strikers, who returned the fire, whereupon the second volley was given by the militia. The mob of men and women alike then scattered and ran through the gullies and ravines. It was then found that one of the strikers, Fred Hoffmann, had been instantly killed and another injured so that he cannot recover. A third was shot through the head. Several made their escapes leaving bloody trails behind them. Twenty-six of the mob were taken prisoners; one soldier was wounded.

How He Was Shot.

Fred Hoffmann, who was killed in yesterday's encounter, came from Gettysburg, and was a glass blower. He had been in Belleville over two weeks. The glass blowers at Belleville are on a strike, and some of them were with the striking miners yesterday, which accounts for Hoffmann's presence at the Belleville stock yards.
