Oar Navy Yards.

The commission which has been inves. tigating the condition, ability and cost of the many navy yards we sustain, has reported to the secretary of the navy and has made radical recommendations towards the reduction of the number of yards and the cost of maintaining those which it thinks should be kept. The yards at San Francisco, Norfolk and New York, it advises to be retained and improved. Those at Pensacola and New London it recommends to be abolished. The Portsmouth, New Hampshire, yard. there is a diversity of opinion about, some of the members thinking it should be abandoned, while others think it beauty. should be maintained for the present as a repair yard for wooden vessels. The Boston yard the commission unanimous ty think should be retained, but some of the members, as we understand the report, consider that it should only be actively operated during times of war. The League Island yard, it is thought should not be kept open on its present plan, as an ordinary navy yard. The commission think that it should wife, immediately on his return from the be made into a great yard for ill starred Jeannette expedition, has just the construction of iron vessels. but that unless it is determined to fit it up for that purpose, there will be no advantage to the country in establishing it inasmuch as we are more than sufficiently supplied already with yards of gentleman, as he would soon find himself ordinary capacity and resources. The dismissed from the navy. His desire for report seems to have been well considered notoriety has apparently overcome all his and its recommendations sound sensibly, sense of propriety. The concentration of the government work into a few yards would be ad vantageous in an economical view, and probably the one navy yard on the Pacific at Mare island and the one on the Atlantic at Portsmouth, Virginia, with a great iron ship building yard at League island would suffice for our needs. Certainly the two yards would meet all our present requirements, for we do not seem to require much of a navy. If we should ever again go to war there would be an elegant time of profit for private ship building yards. ## The Nickerson Livorce Set Aside.

The decision of Judge Ticayer, setting aside the divorce of Major Nickerson because it was procured by fraud, was a terse presentation of the facts of the case and a merciless summing up of the evils which are possible under the laws of this state. Here was a man who sent his wife and child to Europe, parting from them in New York in the most affectionate manner, without the slightest suggestion on the part of either that the marriage tie was galling in the least. He continued to write to her until about a year ago, and sent her money even much later. Having secured a nominal residence in Philadelphia he entered suit for divorce, charging desertion, and according to law, gave notice by publica tion, and in due course of time the di vorce was granted, when he married another woman. When his wife discov ered, to her astonishment, that she had been divorced she returned and entered suit for setting aside the decree upon the ground of fraud. This has just been done and the guilty officer is on the way to dismissal from the army and cen sequent disgrace.

Judge Thayer, in his opinion setting aside the divorce, emphasizes the defects of the law providing for notice, and the opportunities it affords for the p-rpeiration of fraud. He makes the practical suggestion that personal service upon the defendant and return by the legal officer should be required in all cases, thus rendering it certain that no such frauds as the one almost successfully carried out would be possible. That something must be done to remove the reproach at taching to our existing divorce laws is plain enough. They are now so loose and decrees have become so cheap under their operation that Indiana, Illinois and other Western states, which formerly ·had almost a monopoly of the business. have now lost it and Pennsylvania has become one of the great divorce centres of the country. A few such cases as the one under consideration will cause the people of the state to demand the correction of this gross abuse. The only regret is that the Legislature, which has just adjourned, did not take up the work so that the state might not be exposed two years more to the danger and re proach possible under existing laws.

W.), Beecker, of first class cadets; Jacobs, Warfield, DeKraft, Fenton, of the second class cadets ; Winrow, Griswold, Dodd, Jenkins and Breed, of the third class. Diplomas were then handed to the remaining graduates in funereal silence, the situation being painful and gloomy. This' over, all the cadets were marched out to the new quarters, where they were dismissed.

Then it was discovered that the first words Captain Ramsey had spoken were that there should be no applauding, and the unfortunato cadets, like nearly all the audience, had not heard it. Officers and cadets crowded around the superintendent and represented the situation, and Captain Ramsay relented and ordered those who had had not heard the orders released. In an hour the cadets were onco more at liberty. Messrs, Glascock, Gray and Webster, of the graduates, were als given their diplomas. Orders of graduates detach them from the academy and send them to their homes.

Cadets say the reason why Captain Ramsay did not want any applauding was that there were several of his " spoonies," as the cadets call some of their fellow who stand by the captain, in the graduatthat the cattle drive thus far this season ing class, who would have been marked by a disapproving silence.

Keystone, Masonic Organ. The 30th annual cooclave of the grand commandery of Pennsylvania, was hold in the city of Luneaster on May 29 and 30, 1883 Lancaster is one of the oldest cities in our state and famed for the enterprise, stability and solid worth of its citizons. Upon this occasion the city was one continnons scene of life and activity. The citizens vied with the Templars of Lancaster in decorating their houses and extending their hospitality to all the visitors ..... The Knights Templar and citizens of Lan caster are famed for their hospitality, as by 93,419 men and boys, and 42,432 none of us forget their treatment of visitors when the grand commandery met there six years ago. That treatment they at this time surpassed, for not only the Templars but all the citizens of Lancaster vied with each other in their courteous treatment of the visitors ..... Along the entire route of the parade the streets were thronged with people, while every window was occupied with spectators. The marching of the knights was excellent, receiving much applause as they performed their various movements. The entire parade was a success in every home on Friday last. Six members of a particular.
