VOICE FROM THE PEOPLE. The Greatest Curative Success of the Age.

No medicine introduced to the public has ever met with the success accorded to Hop Bitters. It stands to day the best known cu-rative article in the world. Its marvellous renown is not due to the advertsing it has received. It is famous by reason of its inhe-rent virtues. It does all that is claimed for it. It is the most powerful, speedy and effec-tive agent known for the building up of de-bilitated systems and generally family medi-cine.

SHOT BY CAPTAIN NUTT'S SON. live shots Fired at Him in the Street

Three Fatal-The Story of Eye Witnesses-The Inquest and Feeling.

The body of N. Lyman Dukes lies in the Jennings house, Uniontown, cold in death. James Nutt, whose father, Capt. A. C. Nutt, was murdered by Dukes on the 24th day of December last, has taken a terrible revenge. At twenty-five min-utes after seven o'clock Wednesday evening Dukes was shot and almost instantly killed by young Nutt, who is the eldest son of the late cashier of the treasury. Dukes was standing in front of the Jena few minutes before seven. He remained there talking to several acquaintances and was apparently in the best of humor, for he laughed and conversed in an unusually inquiry along the streets was : " free manner. Just before the shooting he started after his mail. The postoffice is in which it is located stands on the corner of Main and Pittsburgh streets, and has been known ever since its erection many years ago as the " Round Corner." Five Shots Fired.

Immediately in front of the postoffice went home, and and facing on Main street is a store, which he said to her : has for many years been used as a drug-gist's establishment. The drugs have been removed and the front of the store is completely torn out and is being remodeled for a banking room for the First national bank. In this room, near Main street, stood James Nutt, and when Dukes reached the spot or got a little beyond where he stood Nutt opened fire on him and shot him two successive times in the back near the heart. Dukes started on a back near the heart. Dukes started on a dead rue, pursued by Nutt, who fired three more shots. Two of them took effect in the back, only about two inches from the first two, and the fifth and the last bullet struck him in the left ankle as he was going up the postoffice steps. There are two steps leading up into the office, and when Dukes reached the top one he fell forward on his face. There was an immense crowd of people standing around immense crowd of people standing around on the outside of the office and they rau in every direction to escape the shots. The fifth ball only grazed the left ankle, and glanced off and went through some of the

ock boxes. "I Could Not Help It."

A number of persons rushed up the steps after Dukes and at the same time Policeman Pegg rau up and caught Nutt, who made no resistance whatever, but said to the officer : "Here, you take this;" whereupon he gave him his revolver. Pegg said to him : "You have done a bad piece of work," to which Nutt replied: "Yes, but I could not help it." "Yes, but I could not help it." . The officer took Natt to jail and Duke: was carried to that same old room in the Jennings house where Captain Nutt was fennings house where Captain Nutt was marked afterwards that it had to be done. tilled by him and which he has continued o occupy ever since. Coroner Sturgeon arrived on the scene f the shooting and took charge of Dukes' body. Dukes lived only about half a minute after being shot the last time. A friend of his was at his side and he tried to speak, but could only mutter something, but so indistinctly that It could not be understood. He knew who shot him, evi-

When Dukes shot Captain Nutt he was treated to the best room in the sheriff's mansion and had the run of the house, but it is different now. The coroner was on his way to the postoffice when the shooting occurred, and arrived there just before life was extinct, and it was all that a dozen men could do to keep the immense crowd from the nings house when the evening mail arrived body. There was one or two cries of "Stand back and give him air," and many were the shouts : "He needs no air, let

The inquiry along the streets was : "Is he dead ?" and when told yes, the reply was : 'He will have to argue his own case at only a block from the Jennings house. It the bar he has gone before now." The faces on Pittsburgh street and the building case to disbar him was to have taken place in chambers on Friday of this week, but that unpleasantness will not have to be gone over again.

The universal feeling is sympathy with James Nutt. Only a few days ago he wenthome, and when he met his mother to her on that subject.

The Mother's Unavailing Appeals to Him Not to Use Violence.

James Nutt is the second of Captain Nutt's children, being next in age to Miss Lizzie, and will be twenty-one years old in August next. He is a quiet young man, seldom having anything to say except when spoken to, and not much then. He is of a peculiar turn of mind, not being very sociable, but decidedly retired. When his father was killed not a few predicted that James would avenge the death. Mrs. Nutt was also apprehensive that her son would thus take the matter into his own hands and had tried hard and often to induce him to promise her that he would not do so. She could never get him to give her any assurance, however, as he persistently refused her appeals. A few days ago he went home in a very irri table mood and said to his mother: "Mother, I can't stand this. I met Dukes on the street to day, and he laughed in my face." She feared from this time on the worst would come. It is not known when nor where James purchased the revolver, nor is it thought that anyone had any in-tatives were about to declare his seat vacant when he sent in his resignation. It was generally believed in Uniontown that dently, for he turned around when the first shot was fired and looked at Nutt while he was firing the second time and then ran. As soon as he was pronounced dead by the coroner the body was taken to that room of his where he killed the father of the boy who killed him. The Officer's Story.

The coroner then impaneled his jury, which consists of Andrew J. Gilmore, as foreman; George C. Marshall, Dr. L. S. Gaddis, John N. Dawson, W. H. Miller and H. H. Hoskney, jr. After the jury was sworn it was decided to postpone the examination of witnesses until in the morning at 8 o'clock. One witness, however, was examined, and that was Officer Pegg, who witnessed the shooting and arrested Nutt. He testified that he was standing on the opposite corner and saw Dukes walking down the street. Nutt was in the room of the " Round Corner.' When Dukes had stepped by Nutt, Nutt shot twice and Dukes looked around and ran. Nutt ran after him and fired three more times. The officer ran after them and caught Nutt just after he had fired the last shot. Nutt, he said, made no resistance, but handed him his revolver, saying : "You take this." The witness told him he had done a bad piece of work, and Nutt replied : "I could not help it. Armed with Dirk and Revolver.

The jury then proceeded to examine the body. The coat was first taken off and searched. The pockets only contained some papers, which were not touched. The back had four bullet holes in the left side. The vest contained nothing of any importance and the holes in the vest cor esponded with those in the coat. A dirk knife was found hanging to the suspender button on Duke's left side, where he could grasp it in an instant with his right hand, and in his right hip-pocket was found the identical revolver with which he shot Captain Nutt. The dirk was ready for a close encounter and the revolver for long range. Many thought that the revolver used by Nutt was the same his father had at the time Dukes killed him, but it was not. It was a Colt 32 calibre and not so large as the one his father had. All these things were taken by the coroner.

On later examination of the wounds it was found that three of the balls and not four penetrated the body. They are so close together that a ring four inches in liameter will cover them all. Two of them went clear through the body and could be seen just through the skin, one hour, whichever you may indicate, and on the right side of the breast and the other, which fractured a rib. as near the middle of the breast as could be.

The Wounds all Fatal. These balls were cut out and the holes robed by the coroner and his father, Dr. W. H. Sturgeon. It was found that these balls passed to the right of and very near the heart. The third hole was then probed and the ball was found lodged in the muscular tissues of the heart. This ball passed through the lungs first and then into the heart. It is thought that any one of these three balls would have caused his death. The two balls that went ing over t'e floor. Nutt was pulled to through to the breast and were extracted are also in the hands of the coroner. The other. OAPTAIN NUTE'S MURDER.

A Review of the Crime Which Led to Last Night's Shooting.

The death of Nicholas Lyman Dukes follows quickly upon the death of his victim, Captain A C. Nutt. Dukes was a young lawyer, and in November last was elected as a Damocrat to the Legislature. Captain Nutt was the cashier of the state treasury. Both men were very popular. On the 4th of December Dakes, who had been paying attentions to Miss Lizzie Nutt, wrote a letter to Captain Nutt, which he mailed on the 11th. In it he said that he had heard stories concerning Miss Lizzie's chastity, and during one of his visits made certain proposals, to which she readily yielded. Subsequently he accused Lizzie with not confining favors to himself, and she confessed that she had been led astray. Dakes onded his letter by telling the captain that he feared his daughter was in a delicate condition, and suggested that he might save his family from disgrace if he eared to Captain Nutt dated his letter in reply to this as Harrisburg, December

17. In it he wrote : "You mistake the temper of the man with whom you have to deal. You write to me as if you considered me a shameless coward, and even suggest to me the hid cous office of the abortionist.' I shall convince you that I have the physical courage to esponse my daughter's cause and defend the honor of myself and family, and, further, that I have the moral cour age to rest secure in the approval of the community in which I live, should this whole miserable affair become fully known to the world. Your letter is the plea of a quibbler, and not the open, sincere, truthful statement of a gentlemin and a man of honor. You conceal important facts in the case. It rests with you whether this affair ends in a legal farce or a tragedy. This commonwealth is not big enough for both of us under existing complica tions I will be at home December 23, and the two following days, when you and I ean talk face to face."

Two days later Dukes wrote in reply : " I cannot accept for a wife the toy of the town and thus become the batt of the town's mocking derision. Death is far sweeter. I declare in all soberness that I doubt if I am the author of the present difficulty. If I were I have committed no such heinous offense as you charge, as the girl is not what she ought to ba. I don't care to walk into a death trap, but if you want to see me you can call upon me either at my office at S p. m. Saturday, December 23, or at my room at same you shall see me quietly and peaceably.' Captain Nutt reached his home in Uniontown on Saturday night, December 23. The next morning he made a confi dant of his nephew, Clark Breckenridge, and together they walked to the Jennings house, where Dukes boarded. They were shown to his room. Nutt entered, Breck enridge remaining outside in conversation with the son-in-law of the landlord, J. L. Feather. In a moment there were sounds of scuffling. Then it was that Brecken-ridge and Feather rushed into the room and parted the two men, who were roll one corner of the room and Duke to an-
