NEW ADVERTISEMENTS.

SATURDAY—FAIR AND WARMER.

The old families of Philadelphia used to go for their best Dry Goods to L. J. Levy & Co., the fine old merchants of their time, whose store stood in the Old Postoffice Building, next to the custom house.

In our early days Chestnut street, below Fifth, was the centre of fashionable trade, but all things move on, the postoffice moves to Ninth street and the fashionable trade to Broad street. We take our turn in providing for this same fine family trade, and for proof of our ability to serve these family supplies see our Linen Department and ask the housekeepers who come year after year for sheets and pillow casings, towels and the like. We submit also this abbreviated list of staple things in stockings, of which we hold all the year round the same makes and qualities.

We do not mean to have a store for the "best stocking for a quarter" or the "best silk for a dollar," but shall have the best of goods of all kinds and a steady stock at steady prices with the bargains sprinkled in alongside of the full lines of regular and always wanted goods.

The stock to-day in Hosiery and Underwear alone, is over $200,000 at our low retail prices. There is no boast intended by the mention of the figures. It is only to show the vastness of our preparations for your trade that sends us to all England, France, Germany, as well as over our own country.

When you have settled on the makes and weights of underwear and stockings you like, our store shall be the closet to which you can go at any time for more of the same sort. The very best makes of the globe are literally laid at your feet, such as Morley, Brettle, Smythe, Esche, Cartwright, Smedley and Heinrich Schopper; if any new maker comes along we put him at your service.

This list is not of broken lots or jobs, but the carefully made staples in unbleached and white cotton and lisle hosiery, such as we are never without. Fancies must be left for another item.
