FARM NOTES.

attend to the Uniteloupes-Other Matter

Germantown Telegraph. If not time now, it soon will be, for the young cantleoupe plants to be attended to, and the hills in which there too many vines be thinned out, always allowing the strongest to remain, three plants being enough in a hill In removing the weeds and stirring the soil, too much care cannot be bestowed so as not to disturb the vines after they have commenced running, as it must be remembered that a large proportion—indeed, much the larger proportion-of the nourishment of the vines is derived from the soil through the rootlets attached thereto as the growth progresses. When the fruit has reached about one-half its size, put a small piece of slate which is the best, through a piece of shingle or thin board will answer, under each canteloupe, and it will prevent the earth from extracting the flavor from about onefourth the fruit, as we commonly find to be the case with 'the purchased canteloupes. Of course this method will not answer for large crops intended for market, but it should not be neglected in garden crop for domestic consumption, if we desire the full and exquisite flavor of this, in our judgment, incomparable fruit. To Keep Clatern-Water Pure.

When cistern-water is pure there is none better or more wholesome; but it is frequently the case that in summer it becomes offensive and quite unfit for use. To remove the offensiveness lime is gener. ally recommended, a large lump or two to a cistern holding four or five thousand gallons; but, if too much is used the water becomes hard and does not "agree" with some people, and does not answer so well for cooking. Charcoal is frequently employed with excellent effect; but that which is the most officient, as a correspondent in Rhode Island assured us some time ago, is to allow the supply spout to run to the bottom of the cistern. The fresh water being heavier than the old, forces the latter to the surface and is thus consumed before it becomes offensive, and so on at each rain. This looks like being a remedy for what has been so much complained of, and will be an answer to many inquiries made of us on the subjec'. But there are certain conditions that should be observ ed by all having a cistern, the first of which is that it should be thoroughly served in the same way whenever needed. How Long Butter Will Keep.

A few years ago while a well in this place was being cleaned, a half-pound of butter was found in the bottom as good and sweet as when first made. How long it had been there no one knew. The pres ent occupant of the premises has been 15 years on the place, and the pump being in constant use there had been no occasion before to have it cleaned. The butter must have been there all this time, and how long before is not known The out side was of a paler color than that within, but otherwise there was no change.

It is not unknown to good dairy folks that butter will keep well in cool, pure spring water, and some have taken advan tage of the fact to preserve butter in close vessels under the surface. But we think it is not generally known that it would keep so long and in actual contact with the water. It might be of great value whother this hint about preserving butter might not be taken advantage of, so as to initiate a regular plan of preserving but ter sweet and fresh, until markets or other circumstances favor good prices. It is one of the weaknesses of the butter business that at some seasons prices are ruinously low and the usual remedy of potting is not a very good cure.

The water of course must be cool and pure. At a high temperature, such as most water near the surface reaches vegetable organisms grow that would soon communicate decay to any organic matter in the water; but there are many places where a lagoon of the proper condi tion of pure well water could readily be constructed.

It may not be out of place here to remark that little hints such as these are continually occurring in almost every one's experience, but only soon to be forgotten. Yet often if the suggestion be listened to and the thread followed up one might get on the track of some good idea that would rapidly make a fortune. We thing that new inventions require much study; but the truth is most of our best discoveries have been by accident.

Detectives and Private Officers Usually wear their badges of authority con-cealed under their clothing, but Dr. Thomas' Eclectric Oil wears its bad, es in the form of printed labels attached to each and every botprinted rapels attached to each and every bot-tle, so that all may know its mission. It is given full and complete—athority to acrest all aches and pains, and does its duty every time. For sale by H. B. Cochran, druggist, 137 and 139 North Queen street.
