AFTERNOON TELEGRAMS.

THE WATERS AT WILKESBARRE.

The Heavy Rains Overflow a Creek and Run the Waters in the Mines With Great Force.

WILKESBARRE, Pa., June 27.—It has been raining here for several days and during last night it poured in torrents.

The Baltimore dam, covering several acres of the outskirts of the city, gave way this morning, filling a creek running over the lands of the Chesapeake & Hudson company, and the Baltimore mines.

The water began running into openings Nos. 2 and 3, of the mines, washing out the props and causing an extensive cave in of nearly half an acre.

The water now is finding its level in the Coningham mine and the miners made a hasty retreat. Every effort is being made to carry the stream in another direction.

Should the attempt fail, the loss will be serious. The cave in is located near the one which occurred a few weeks ago. At this hour—2 p. m.—it is thought that there will be no danger to the buildings on the surface, yet the residents in the neighborhood are alarmed.

On presenting his account Mr. Hill and also Mr. Ganoum, an employe in Hill's office, told him that he ought to have something to settle the account. He gave them no encouragement and then his (Wilbur's) claim was disallowed.

A fight afterwards took place during which three of the outlaws were killed and O'Donnell and a man named Wangman were captured. Great excitement prevails and there are threats of lynching.

NEW ADVERTISEMENTS.

THURSDAY—FAIR AND COOLE.

"With a complete assortment, well-made goods and low prices, we invite your attention to our stock, before purchasing elsewhere."

This is not original. Oh, no, we don't say it. Some one else says it and we wouldn't rob them of the credit of it for the world.

Don't think we want to criticise our neighbors or find any fault. On the contrary, every time we see the invitation posted in public places it strikes us as being eminently proper, and we only rise to explain that we hope that the public will do just exactly what they are requested to. Indeed, they can't do better.

JOHN WANAMAHER.

If we could find any way of leading our friends to examine lines of goods carefully in other establishments, so as to be able to compare qualities and prices intelligently before supplying themselves at our store we would do a real service to both them and us.

Our advice to buyers is, don't take the unsupported word of anybody; investigate for yourself, even though you may see better facilities in one place than another—bigger stocks and longer range of styles—make more direct connections with foreign makers and heavier purchases at a sacrifice, and on top of all this, hear on every side what your friends are buying and the bargains they are getting in fresh, perfect goods; still, do some "shopping around" any way; if you can spare the time, the more the better, and see for yourself and not another; and when you shall have gone the rounds pretty well we will invite your attention to our stock, but not "before purchasing elsewhere," for that is a contingency we don't contemplate.

JOHN WANAMAHER.

Trunk Toilet. The rarest and simplest transformation yet devised we have just secured. The old "Saratoga" veteran, bruised and seared by the gauntlet of baggage-smashers, is deftly concealed by a prettily draped toilet table, covered with your fancy trifles that remain undisturbed. You open your trunk just as usual and remove the tray, and the toilet table takes care of itself. The whole fixture packs in an inch of depth in your trunk and is quickly put on and removed. A marvel of tasteful convenience, all ready for a lady to drape, as simply or elaborately as she will—and only a quarter of an eagle. Then there is a grip-sack that folds as flat in your trunk as a healthy pancake, and for a short trip will hold a change or two. They size up from $2.00 to $4.00.

Ladies' Satchels from three-quarters of a dollar to all you want to pay.

A Tourist's All-Leather Bag, $2.25, and better ones with strap, $4.00 to $16.00.

English Club Bags in russet, orange and other colors, $5.50.

Gladstone Valises with black metal frames, $3.50; leather covered frames, $4.75; leather lined, $6.25, and fine, $8.25; finer, $10; superfine, $12.

All the above are now on main floor, near the Market street entrance. Only a minute to make your choice and your train.

JOHN WANAMAHER.

The Creme de la Creme for moonlit porches this season at cool resorts, is the deep creamy white—richer than India Cream—peculiar to the real India Chudda, but now for the first time produced in the French Shooda Shawls, sold at the ever so much lower price of $3.50. Sentimental people have said that the rich-hued, fleecy folds of this shawl blend so sweetly with the moon's rays that the wearer seems enveloped in an ethereal robe; also that many young ladies date their best conquests from the donning of the old "India Chudda." We don't vouch for results, but we do recommend you to spend $3.50 and try it on—the shawl, we mean.
