MEDICAL.

AYER'S PILLS.

A CLEAR HEAD.

"One year ago I was induced to try Ayer's Pills as a remedy for indigestion, Constipation, and Headache, from which I had long been a great sufferer. Commencing with a dose of five Pills, I found their action easy, and obtained prompt relief. In continuing their use, a single Pill taken after dinner, daily, has been all the medicine I have required. Ayer's Pills have kept my system regular and my head clear, and benefited me more than all the medicines ever before tried. Every person similarly afflicted should know their value." M. V. WATSON, of AYER'S PILLS of the stomach and bowels, try AYER'S PILLS.

SUMMER HATS.

For several days we have mentioned hardly anything in Straw Goods. We should err if we produced the impression that all hats have fallen. They hav'nt. Some sorts have fallen here without any corresponding move elsewhere. You can make just as good selections now as you could a month ago, and a little lower. We have now on hand a varied stock of hats of every sort; nothing of value has escaped our gathering. In a word we have undertaken to find out what our patrons want, and at what price they want it, and cutting loose from old traditions to adapt ourselves to their wants. We welcome all.

DORSEY'S LETTERS.

A CAMPAIGN WITH PLENTY OF MONEY

Outfitted by Garfield—Morton, the Great Financier—Cameron to the Rescue—Dorsey Faithful to the Cause.

The New York Sun prints an installment of the Dorsey letters, introducing them as follows:

The first installment of this private correspondence with Republican leaders which Mr. Dorsey published in December, 1882, was only a foretaste of the resources he has to reveal for future use. He held relations of exceptional confidence with Garfield, Conkling, Arthur, Grant, Morton, Chandler, Allison, and other chiefs of the party, representing all factions and interests.

His selection as secretary of the national committee, at the personal request of Garfield, backed by the urgent solicitation of Arthur and of Blaine's special friends, substantially gave Mr. Dorsey command of the campaign of 1880. Marshall Jewell, chairman of that committee, was a mere figurehead without any real authority.

Garfield visited New York in the beginning of August, 1880, when the outlook was most gloomy. He then and there made certain propositions to the Stalwart leaders, which were reduced to writing, and which still exist to confound the excuses offered for his flagrant breach of faith to the men whom he sought to conciliate by the most profuse but hollow promises of recognition in the event of success.

After returning to Mentor, Garfield sketched out a general plan of campaign in a letter to Arthur, dated August 30, 1880, in which he laid great stress upon the necessity of making a "split" in the ranks. A copy of that letter was furnished to Mr. Dorsey by the late president.

The keynote of the scheme is sounded in the following extracts from it: "All these plans require the employment of a large number of men and of much money."

"And this brings me to the chief point. It is indispensable necessary that the means for putting these plans into vigorous execution be furnished at once. The work has been started and must be supported promptly to insure success."

"Please read this letter to Morton, and, if you concur in the views I have taken, urge him to act as promptly and vigorously as possible. I want over the whole ground with Senator Dorsey when he is here on route for Chicago, and his letters since his arrival there strongly confirm my opinions."

The candidate of the party of moral ideas, in writing to his associate on the ticket, urges above all things that "much money" should be raised to put his plans into vigorous execution at once. "Principles and high purposes had no place in his mind. They were only useful for making a platform. When Garfield tells Arthur 'Please read this letter to Morton, and, if you concur in the views I have taken, urge him to act as promptly and vigorously as possible,' he is revealing the gist of the secret bargain made by him in New York."

Mr. Morton was not a member of the national committee. He was an outsider in Congress, rich and ambitious. Garfield had offered in the event of success, to make him secretary of the treasury, minister to France, or at the head of a syndicate for the conversion of the government loans, if Morton would take charge of the finances.

The letters of Morton to Dorsey show that he acted "promptly and vigorously" as Garfield had requested, for in a few days after the letter of the latter to Arthur, Morton wrote to Dorsey as follows:

FAIR LAWN, NEWPORT, R. I., September 6, 1880.

DEAR SENATOR DORSEY: I expect to send you $50,000 more in a day or two. I have already called a meeting of my committee (which has been largely increased) for Thursday, and after that I hope to be able to go on in response to Gen. Garfield's invitation to Mentor for a conference, and to learn more details of your proposed campaign in the West. I want Mr. Hubbell in New York at my meeting on the 9th at 11 a. m.

Yours, L. P. MORTON.

Again: NEWPORT, Sept. 7, 1880.

DEAR MR. DORSEY: I have just received yours of the 31st instant, and I have read with great interest your plan of action. I was very glad to hear of the receipt of yours of the 29th, enclosing my check for the amount you asked ($5,000), and now enclose my check for $5,000 additional. This makes my personal advances $40,000, without having collected a dollar from any of my subscribers.

He said Mr. New must stop short unless Mr. Jewell could send him $10,000. I finally gave him a check for $4,000 (to Mr. New's order), and also sent $5,000 more to Senator Blaine who was in distress.

I think you had better inform Gen. Arthur confidentially of your plans and my action, and consult with him. Yours very truly, L. P. MORTON.

Again: No. 25 NASSAU STREET, NEW YORK, September 17, 1880.

DEAR SENATOR DORSEY: I have your personal note and am sorry to see you dissatisfied by the result made by my people. Your friends here have entire confidence in you and the success of your labors. You can, I think, safely count upon all the assistance your estimates call for. I enclose $5,000 herewith. Keep up your courage. We are bound to carry New York and to win the race. Very truly yours, L. P. MORTON.

Again: NEW YORK, Sept. 18, 1880.

DEAR MR. DORSEY: Yours of the 15th was received yesterday. I immediately telegraphed recommending your going to Indianapolis. I learn this morning through Mr. Hubbell that you are in immediate want of money. I sent you yesterday morning, before the receipt of your letter, $5,000, as I am going to Newport for two or three days, although I did not know you were in immediate need of money. I will pay you the draft of $3,000 advised by Mr. Hubbell, and send you herewith my check for $1,000, which, with the $2,000 subscribed to our committee by Mr. Bosler, and sent you by him, makes $20,000 in all. Very truly yours, L. P. MORTON.

Again: NEW YORK, Sept. 30, 1880.

DEAR SIR: Mr. Morton desires me to inform you that he arrived this morning and has had a conference with Senator Allison, Mr. Hubbell and others. He does not see any prospect for securing any money in time for your use from Mr. Gould, but as he has a telegram from Senator Cameron saying that his father goes to Philadelphia to-day and that he will be in New York to-morrow, Mr. Morton feels confident that we shall be able to send you, altogether, $100,000 (including the $10,000 he sent you from Cleveland), and he hopes to increase this amount. Very truly yours, P. P. HUBBETT, Private Secretary.

The letters are reproduced now because they contain positive proof that Dorsey was held in the highest esteem by the late president and by his most trusted friends, and that he enjoyed more than any other Republican manager, the unbounded confidence of the leaders of that party.

The New minister to Peru.

Now that Mr. Partridge's resignation as minister to Peru has been accepted and S. L. Phelps, of Ohio, has been appointed to succeed him, it may be inferred that the state department has at length made up its mind definitely as to its future policy with respect to Chili and Peru. This inference may be considered as strengthened by the fact that Mr. Phelps will be accompanied to South America by a newly appointed minister to Bolivia, Mr. Hubbell and Gibbs, of New York, being selected for that post. It is not perhaps impossible in the absence of definite information from the state department, to conjecture what policy Mr. Frelinghuysen has made up his mind to, and what instructions have been given to the new minister, particularly the one accredited to Peru; it is not to be rashly supposed that Mr. Phelps is charged with the duty of boldly recognizing the Iglesias government, favored at Lima, in preference to its rival led behind the scenes at Arequipa. Our worthy secretary of state possesses a fresh recollection of Mr. Blaine's fortunes in Peruvian diplomacy, and has himself not lacked instructive experiences during his term of office. Time and meditation, it is fair to assume, have not dulled his statecraft.

Since his correspondence with Lord Granville relative to the Clayton-Bulwer treaty, and the panic in the state department caused by Mr. Partridge's departure at Lima to sign an informal agreement with Peru, it is more than likely that Mr. Frelinghuysen's attachment to the astute diplomatic maxim—"Last said, soonest mended"—is increased rather than diminished. It is fair, therefore, to infer that Mr. Phelps' instructions in this regard, in describing and deploring the anarchical condition of Peru, and suggesting the propriety of efforts to remedy it. For this act which committed his government to nothing and which was certainly within any reasonable man's discretion, Mr. Partridge was forthwith granted a leave of absence. His successor will doubtless understand, from this spirited conduct of the state department, that however uncertain and fluctuating the Chili-Peruvian policy of the United States has hitherto been, for the future it is to be positively negative. The minister to Peru is to propose nothing, sign nothing, advise nothing. Whatever flowers of diplomatic speech may adorn his credentials, implying that he really has a mission, he will understand from the experiences of Messrs. Christiancy, Hubbert, and Partridge that, in the view of the state department, his proper duty is to draw his salary and improve his knowledge of Spanish.
