The feeble gasps of children dying, And the loud wailing of despair That rend the suffocating air ? What are all these to him : Why, sir, He wakes up people, and they stir, And if they catch the villain he Is hanged, or used to be. Laws may, but justice does not alter : He escapes, though he deserves the halter;

And were be doomed to it again, The people would all say "Amen!" *Rev. John Pierpont was one of the most vigorous of New England poets in the first half of the present century. The lines published herewith are not found in the collected edition of his works, and it is not known that they have been published heretofore. They are contributed to Our Continent by a correspondent, who heard them recited by the author some thirty years ago, and are as appropriate now as they were then.

Fruit Along Roads. Germantown Telegraph.

It is singular that along dusty roadsides there is generally au abundance of fruit and this abundance is usually in proportlon to the quantity of dust. Not only is the fruit abundant, but the leaves are generally remarkably healthy; and we do not remember an instance of a blighted or a seriously diseased tree, when, they have been covered with roadside dust. If there are any doubters let them see for them selves. This has been frequently noted in regard to old pear trees in gardens along roadsides; but as to the cherry it is very striking, especially low headed piecherries, which are more easily covered with dust than trees of larger size. The trees do not seem to mind it in the least.

We do not pretend to account for this curious fact, but rest with simply stating it. It is supposed that the plant breathes through its leaves—how it does this when covered with dust it is not for us to say. It may be that the minute insects which crowd on fruit trees generally don't like dust; indeed, people do say that it is to destroy insects that chickens so love to cover themselves with dust. Again, some people have a notion that many fruit diseases come from minute fungi, which develop on the leaves and branches, and soon cover the whole surface, destroying tissues as they go. It may be that abscutely dry dust falling on these minute juicy little plants, may suck the moisture out of them and leave them high and dry. We do not pretend to discuss any of these propositions; at the same time it is curious to note that these dust covered fellov s should always do so well.

Liquid Manure, Again. The subject of the value of liquid manure in its application to crops, whether in field, garden or lawn, has been dis-cussed so often, and we had supposed was so effectually disposed of, that we are almost surprised to see that it is again on the carpet, and has its advocates as before, without, however, showing any de gree of clearness that as a manure, counting all the advantages and disadvantages, it is worthy of any real consideration. We will again refer to the one time celebrated London alderman, Mechi, who becoming a millionaire from the results of trade went to farming on a large scale, and meant apparently to turn the farming world upside down in new methods of farming and money making by it. He was among the first to apply liquid manure to field crops, and for this purpose prepared a great deal of machinery and employed a great many men to do the work. His crops, it is true, bore testimony of its great fertilizing qualities, and these re-turns Mr. M. was not slow in laying before the British agricultural public. His sta tistics were quoted far and wide in the United States, and he had a great many followers here on paper at least; but those who adopted his methods of applying this manure abandoned it as soon as they found out its expensiveness. These practical farmers, who strove to make a living and money besides by farming, soon failed to see that in all Mr. Mehi's statements be made no comparison as to the relative (xpense of the two modes of application of the manure and the relative products. This was carefully omitted, until after a few years the rumor spread that this wealthy innovator had actually abandoned the application of liquid manure, with all its expensive machinery and small army of men to run it, and returned to the old mode of enriching the soil as the quickest and the most profitable.

We have no doubt that for small lawns and gardens, where the expense is a mat ter of consequence, there is no mode of enrichment so certain and effective as liquid manure, for in these cases it can be applied with watering pots commonly used by gardeners. For this purpose, a basin should be dug from ten to twelve feet in diameter and about three feet deep, which should be filled with stable manure, and either a conductor from a roof be turned upon it-rainwater being the best-or supplied from hydrant or pump, the water being added gradually, so as to admit of daily turning over of the mass. In a few days or a week it will be fit for the necessity may occur. In this limited way liquid manure can be used with great effect; but upon a farm it would take a mint of money to so dispose of it, what ever the beneficial results may be upon the

A Strike in Bethiebem.

The dissatisfaction of employes in the The dissatisfaction of employes in the steel mill of the Bethlehem iron company has culminated in a determination to strike and resist a further decrease in wages. Many of the employes belong to the Amalgamated Iron and Steel association, and the presence recently of Messrs. Jarrett and Lee, of the National association, has given encouragement to the men. A committee has called upon Superintendent Fritz with a view of adjusting difficulties, but no satisfactory result was attained. Another conference was held, but no definite arrangement was made. The company threatens to shut down the large steel mill rather than down the large steel mill rather than comply with the demands of their workmen and orders have already been issued to close the mill as soon as all the iron has been run out of the cupolas, but it is believed that this order will be recalled if the company and employes arrive at an early agreement. Should the steel mill close the blast furnaces will also be blown out. Feeling runs high and much excitement and confusion prevails among the Boats, Bicycles and Hay Fever. Nature has resolved that all the people are not to enjoy therselves at once. With the pening of the season of outdoor sports comes Hay Fever. For them flowers have no odor, and the summer little or no beauty. To snuff necze and wipe their weeping eyes for three or four successive months—this is their pitever, makes no difference; they suffer just the same. There is no help in sea voyages, there is no help in high mountain air. These only lighten the pocket and leave the disease unabated. But there is a positive cure in Elv's because you neglect a remedy as sure as it is cheap and pleasant. jell-2wd&w
