FLINN & BRENNEMAN.
TO PROPERTY OWNERS AND PAINTERS.
As a business transaction would you be willing to pay one dollar for an article you could purchase for ninety cents? We are the agents for Lancaster and vicinity for Wadsworth, Martinez & Longman's Pure Prepared Paints.
And we claim that they are the best and cheapest paints in America. And we don't make this assertion and leave it unsupported. Paint one-half of any surface or one-half of any building with this paint and the other half with strictly pure White Lead and Linseed Oil, or any other mix of paints in this country, and if the part painted with this paint does not cost ten per cent. less than for paint used, we will make no charge for our paint. And further, any building that has been painted with this paint that is not satisfactory to the owner, and not remaining so for a proper term of years, we will repaint at our own expense with White Lead and Linseed Oil or any other paint he may select. As many of the prepared paints are adulterated with benzine and water we make this liberal offer. We will pay one thousand dollars for any benzine or water found in any original package of WADSWORTH, MARTINEZ & LONGMAN'S PURE PREPARED PAINTS.

BUCHANAN IN ENGLAND.
HIS APPEARANCE AT COURT.
Harriet Lane's Companionship with her Uncle—The Queen's Patronage of the American Beauty.

The election of Franklin Pierce to the presidency in 1853, brings the reader of Curtis' biography to Buchanan's appointment to the English mission. The intervening events of his life had been the purchase of Wheatland, his home, near Lancaster, and several public letters and addresses.
At this time there appears a new figure by the side of Buchanan's public life. The solitary bachelor shows a new and a beautiful side of his character in his correspondence with his niece, Harriet Lane, whose education he directed, and whom he trained from a girl to a lady. Social and domestic life, therefore, were not wanting to any statesman. It is a part of his life which, was colored with affection. His letters to his niece are remarkable examples of tender care, deep principle, thorough confidence and happy playfulness. These letters run through the school life of Harriet Lane, her entrance into society, and intersperse the years during which she occupied, with graceful dignity, a conspicuous position in her uncle's household. Their tone will be indicated by the extract:
WASHINGTON, July 6, 1846.
MY DEAREST HARRIET: My labors are great; but do not "wag" me down, as you write the word. Now I would say "weigh," but doctors may differ on this point.
I hope Mary has recovered ere this from her bruises. Give my love to her and tell her to have her saddle girthed tighter the next time she rides.
Your friends, Mrs. Bancroft and the Pleasantons, often inquire for you and kindness. They have given you somewhat of a name here; and Mrs. Polk and Miss Rutter, her niece, have several times urged me to permit you to come and pass some time with them. I have been as deaf as the adder to their request, knowing that you are a ward of your grandmother, that you are too "outstanding" already. There is a time for all things under the sun, as the wise man says, and your time will yet come.
Yours,
JAMES BUCHANAN.

Mr. Buchanan sailed for England August 1, 1853. Twenty years before, as minister to Russia, he had passed a short time in London. At this time Victoria had been sixteen years on the throne; Lord Aberdeen had been directed to be "Ministry of All the Talents," including Gladstone, at the head of the exchequer and Palmerston at the head of the home department. Buchanan had at the outset to encounter a question of etiquette. The British statesman had directed the United States ministers in Europe to appear at courts "in the simple dress of an American citizen." Hitherto, our diplomatic representatives had worn a simple uniform.
The master of ceremonies at Victoria's court objected strongly to Buchanan's appearance at court in such a way. Buchanan writes:
"He said that her majesty would not object to receive me at court, in my dress as I might appear in my private life, but that she would not permit me to appear at court in my simple dress. He said that she would not object to receive me at court, in my dress as I might appear in my private life, but that she would not permit me to appear at court in my simple dress. He said that she would not object to receive me at court, in my dress as I might appear in my private life, but that she would not permit me to appear at court in my simple dress."

BENSON'S CAPSINE POROUS PLASTERS
SLIGHT ODDS.
A Little Story with a Large Moral—The Man Who knew his own business.
"No, my dear," said the venerable keeper of a country store to a timid little girl, whose head she only came up to the level of the counter. "No, my dear, we haven't any red flannel, but we have some first rate New Orleans molasses." "Really, what is that?" she didn't think that would answer the purpose quite well, the child went her way in search of the article she wanted.
"Have you BENSON'S CAPSINE PLASTERS?" asked a gentleman of a certain drug store whose name could be given were it desired. "I am troubled just now with a touch of my old friend, the lumbago, and the Benson's Plaster seems to go to the spot almost as soon as it touches the skin."
"Not at present," replied the druggist, generally. "But we have lots of plasters just as good as Benson's. There is one called 'Cathartic' and others—won't one of them do as well?"
"My dear sir," returned the gentleman, with a slight show of temper, "I say nothing against those articles, but I am a business man, and always say precisely what I want, and for nothing else. I may enlighten you, however, when I say that some time ago, for another disease, of which the Capsine has since cured me, I tried all those you mention with no appreciable benefit. They are inefficient, every one of them, the most honest of the proprietors of some of them being this: that they make plasters with smaller sounding names to deceive the unwary into believing that they are the same thing. Experience taught me the difference. I'll go to the next man in your line. Good day."

On your guard against imitations. The genuine has the word CAPSINE cut cleanly in the middle of the plaster. All others are impositions.

STONEWALL JACKSON'S SISTERS.
A Reconciliation with her Dying Husband.
The death of Jonathan Arnold, the wealthiest and one of the most distinguished men of West Virginia, has brought to light an interesting and most singular story, concluding with the healing bereavement of a man who had been endeared for twenty years. Arnold came from Fayette county, Pa., about 60 years ago, and by zealous application to business accumulated a snug fortune. Just prior to the war he invested largely in wild lands, owning hundreds of thousands of acres, the subsequent appreciation of which ran his fortune up into the million row. His third wife, who survives him, is a sister of General "Stonewall" Jackson and possessed many of those traits of character so strongly marked in her illustrious brother.
In the second year of the war, Arnold made preparations to visit his sister in an adjoining county, which gave rise to a report among the neighbors that he was about to cast in his lot with the South. Though he had always kept his own counsel, it was known that his sympathy and affections following the cause since lost, and when this move he had been invited to visit his sister, Latham and taken to Clarksburg, where, after six months' confinement, he was released on parole. When the war broke out, Mrs. Arnold, for reasons never disclosed, deserted the cause for which her husband had fought, and she became the cause of the North, remaining a firm friend of the Union throughout the struggle. This was known to her husband; and upon his release from prison he returned home and bitterly upbraided her, accusing her of having been the cause of his arrest. She denied the charge, but he remained inflexible, and then, her pride being aroused, she refused further to defend herself. A separation was arranged, and for twenty years neither man nor wife saw the face of the other.
Mrs. Arnold retained the family home till the close of the war, when she removed to Ohio. Friends interested themselves in arranging a reconciliation, but failed utterly; both were obdurate, and Mrs. Arnold never returned to her husband, forsaking the cause of her father and brother. Ten years ago the wife entered a cross suit for divorce. A long and tedious litigation followed, in the course of which much feeling was engendered, and the breach widened. The court gave the wife an allowance of $1,000 per annum, but refused to grant the petition of Arnold for a divorce. At the conclusion of the suit Mrs. Arnold took refuge in a retreat for the sick in Ohio, while her husband returned to the family mansion.
Three weeks ago Mr. Arnold, then a decrepit old man, was stricken down by a fatal illness. His wife came to his bedside, and through two weeks of delirium was an untiring watcher and nurse. He had never forgiven her, and in his delirium uttered upbraiding words which fell upon the ear of the patient watcher near him. The course of death cleared his mind, and one evening he awoke to consciousness and his eyes lighted upon the wife he had thrust from him. It was a moment of terrible suspense to the few persons in the room. The old man in a feeble voice desired to be alone with her. Then in the chamber already darkened, the approach of dissolution a reconciliation took place, and the excluded watchers heard sobs from the room and entered to find husband and wife locked in a last and forgiving embrace, from which Mr. Arnold was released to die.
Mr. Arnold was a pronounced atheist, and died as he had lived. His scepticism was a continual source of grief to his wife, who partook of her mother's strong religious convictions.
