He died in a few moments after being taken from under the cars of the railroad train. The body was taken to the residence of deceased's father and Coroner Shiffer impauelled a jury con sisting of Wm. J. Fordney, Charles Loag, William Schaum, John P. Martin, W. W. White and James Eichler, for the purpose of holding an inquest. The jury viewed the body and then ad-journed to meet this morning at 10 o'clock, when the employes of the railroad were present and testified.

Richards, the engineer of the train. He testified that he passed through this city at about half past three o'clock this morning and had a train of twenty-eight loaded cars, several of which were to be detached at the freight depot here. He was running at the rate of five or six miles an hour. Just as the train reached the crossing witness saw a man standing between the north track and the siding of the freight depot, and supposed that he would remain there where he was safe. When within about ten feet of him the man suddenly stepped on the track. Witness then quickly blew the whistle and applied the brakes to stop the train; he asked the fireman at the time whether he saw a man and he replied that he had not. Witness then thought that the en gine had passed over the man, and the train was stopped before it had gone the length of several cars; the train men at once got off and found the man lying un der the hind wheels of the truck on the first car. There was some life in him, but he died in a few moments.
