PRIDAY, EVENING, AUG. 17, 1883,

THE OLD TURNPIKE. We hear no more the clanging hoof,

And the stage-coach rattling by ; For the steam-king rules the traveled And the old Pike's left to die. The grass creeps o'er the flinty path, And the stealthy daisies steal,

Where once the stage-horse day by day Litted his iron heel. No more the weary stager dreads

The toil of the coming morn; No more the bustling landlord runs, At the sound of the echoing horn: For the dust lies still upon the road, And bright-eyed children play, Where once the clattering hoof and wheel Rattled along the way.

No more we hear the cracking whip, Or the strong wheels rumbling round ;-Ah, ha, the water drives us on. And an iron-horse is tound !

The coach stands rusting in the yard, And the horse hath sought the plow ; We have spanned the world with an iron rail And the steam-king rules us now!

The old Turnpike is a pike no more, Wide open stands the gate; We have made us a road for Which we ride at a flying rate. We have filled the valleys and leveled the

And tunneled the mountain's side; And round the rough crag's dizzy verge, Fearlessly on we ride!

On-on-on-with a haughty front! A puff, a shrick, and a bound; While the tardy echoes wake too late, To babble back the sound ; And the old Pikeroad is left alone,

And the stagers sought the plow; We have circled the earth with iron rail, And the steam-king rules us now!

Storing and Keeping Potatoes ermantown Telegraph. Of late years the potato has been one o the most profitable of farm crops in the East, and this chiefly arises from the fact that it is somewhat difficult to keep any great quantity of them. Thus only so many are grown that can be preserved, and as the accommodations are limited there is no glut in the market as there are with things which are grown and must be sent to the market at once. Of course there are times when potatoes rule low. This is apt to be the case with early ones, grown especially for early purposes, and which follows the same law that rules in transient vegetables. So also those who grow potatoes and have no conveniences for storing them. These have to be marketed in the fall, and have to take whatever price may rule for them. Those who have good cellars under their barns. or in any place safe from frost and yet cool and dry, can generally make potato growing pay very well; and those are usually the ones who do.

In old times a large quantity of potatoes were stored out of doors in the open ground. They were arranged in long ridges, not in great bulk, as even a mass of potatoes will heat, and covered with earth sufficiently thick to keep out the frost. But since the appearance of the potato disease, this plan is not much followed, though the rotting has of late been very much diminished. The infected tubers will often rot, especially if the mass heats a little, and the diseased ones will often communicate the disease to the rest. In a cellar this can be seen and noted, but in a mound out of doors no one knows of the trouble till spring, when great loss has been found. Besides this, it is so difficult to get at them in winter that those who have no way to preserve potatoes except this, as a general thing prefer not to grow at all rather than to be bothered with Dampness undoubtedly favors the spread of the potato disease, and therefore where there is any chance at all of the dis ease existing in the roots, they ought to be stored as dry as possible. Those which are to be kept in this general way should be dry and cool, but this should be especi ally seen in the case of seed potatoes. Since the potato beetle came among us it is clear that we have had the very bast results from early planting, and by the use of the earliest varieties. Now these sure defence against malarial tevers, besides early kinds are more easily affected by warmth that the late ones. They sprout easily, and coolness is therefore the more easily, and coolness is therefore the more essential for them. Some people think it makes little difference whether seed pota toes sprout or not before planting. We have known people to tear off sprouts several inches long and cut up the tubers in full faith that they will sprout out again and be none the worse for it. They do generally grow: but there is little do generally grow; but there is little doubt they are constitutionally weaker, and much more liable to disease than those which do not sprout till ready to go in the ground.

machinery used upon our farms and plan tations as compared with those of other countries. If for example, we take Italy, Spain, Portugal and the Christian provinces of the late Turkish empire, we shall find them with the peasantry still adhering to the same rude primitive implications. ing to the same rude, primitive implements for the cultivation of their crops that were in vogue many centuries ago, when the civilization of these countries was in its early youth. It is important to bear this fact in mind, because the civilization of the present Brazilian empire owes its origin to Portugal, and the whole of Spanish America is about on a par with Spain in agricultural matters. Occasionally we read in the English papers interesting accounts of the systematic afforts of the Pression government. efforts of the Prussian government to induce the land owners and the peasant farmers in European Russia to adopt American implements, tools and machinery in the cultivation and the harvesting of the graincrops of those provinces. It is also well-known that the British government has been for years past making similar exertions in India, not only in reference to the production of wheat, but also in reference to the culture of cottor. Under such circumstances it is important to know that American agriculture is still progressing in its appliances.

Making Poultry Profitable.

mity. There is often more fault with the keeper and management than with the fowls. The care of poultry, in order to make it profitable, is no child's play, but a daily task. Chickens are early risers and eager for the first worm. Successful poultry keepers are full grown, sensible the care of poultry in the care of poultry risers and eager for the first worm. Successful poultry keepers are full grown, sensible the care of poultry keepers are full grown, sensible the care of poultry keepers are full grown, sensible the care of poultry keepers are full grown, sensible the care of poultry keepers are full grown, sensible the care of poultry keepers are full grown, sensible the care of poultry keepers are full grown, sensible the care of poultry keepers are full grown, sensible the care of poultry keepers are full grown, sensible the care of poultry keepers are full grown, sensible the care of poultry in order to make the CHEAPEST and BEST screen in the market, superfor to the old style and lower in price. Country Gentleman. poultry keepers are full grown, sensible men and women. They succeed as a mat ter of course, and the business looks very easy to outsiders, as in all kinds of enter prises carried on for money making. One reason why so many fail is because they with the slow working up There are some who are really fond of the poultry business, who would gladly unite profit with pleasure, but do not know how to manage it. If one is actually willing to work, can endure fatigue, and can control the temper, it is well to begin low down. Begin (if no previous knowledge has been obtained) with a cock and a dozen hens, and ascertain just how much pa-tience, time, labor, feed and housing are needed to serve this small stock of fowls, together with their progeny. There is frequently great loss with chickens from ignorance as to feeding. I always recom-mend small grain, whole, with cracked corn. It must be given freely, increasing the quantity as they grow, and never stinting them while growing, or after-ward. If small numbers are kept at first and gradually as fast as found profitable, there would be less disappointed poultry keepers. There is something in breed, of course, but often more in the keeper. In the first place it is a good thing to under-stand what the fowls are intended for, stand what the fowls are intended for, whether for eggs or poultry, and treat them accordingly. No one expects to get much flesh on a Leghorn, neither do we expect many eggs from a Brama.

If the Dorkings were better known they would be found in almost every case to meet the needs of the poultry keepers for eggs, and especially for poultry where early broilers are required. They are heavy feeders until grown, but then, for their size, they are considered light consumers. Fowls that are in profit must be large consumers, or they will fail to give a profit. In keeping fowls in large numbers the mistake is often made of herding too many together. They must have room to many together. They must have room to breathe in, and room to exercise and to scratch. It is as natural for a hen to scratch as to breathe, and when taken out of their natural run she must have something to scratch for. The person who undertakes keeping a large henery for profit will learn much through dear experience, and if successful will know what it 18 to work hard.
