LANCASTER, PA., THURSDAY, AUGUST 23, 1883.

Price Two Cents.

FLINN & BRENNEMAN, TO PROPERTY OWNERS AND PAINTERS.

As a business transaction you will be willing to pay one dollar for an article you could purchase for ninety cents? We are the agents for Lancaster and vicinity for Wadsworth, Martinez & Longman's Pure Prepared Paints.
And we claim that they are the best and cheapest paints in America. And we don't make this assertion and leave it unsupported. Paint one-half of any surface or one-half of any building with this paint and the other half with strictly pure White Lead and Linseed Oil, or any other mixed paints in this country, and if the part painted with this paint does not cost ten per cent. less than for paint used, we will make no charge for our paint. And further, any building that has been painted with this paint that is not satisfactory to the owner, and not remaining so for a proper term of years, we will repaint at our own expense with White Lead and Linseed Oil or any other paint he may select. As many of the prepared paints are adulterated with benzine and water we make this liberal offer. We will pay one thousand dollars for any benzine or water found in any original package of WADSWORTH, MARTINEZ & LONGMAN'S PURE PREPARED PAINTS.

OUR AGRICULTURE.

THE HUSBANDMAN AS A CITIZEN.
Governor Pattison's Address at the Grand-ers' Picnic, Williams Grove, August 21, 1883.

LADIES AND GENTLEMEN: "I went by the field of the slothful and by the vineyard of the man void of understanding and lo! it was all grown over with thorns and briars and covered with thorns and the stone wall thereof was broken down. Then I saw and considered it well, I looked upon it and received instruction. These words are as fruitful of suggestion to-day as when uttered by the last lords of King David's sons. But we have come together to-day to consider and receive instruction from the field of industry and the vineyard of the man of intelligence.

The custom which assembles you here is a wise and laudable one. The harvest gathered, hither you who till the soil come to mingle with the work's festivities, a week of study and preparation of discussion and investigation in the great industry of agriculture. Here ingeniously competes with ingenuity and research with research in the effort to devise the best, quickest and least laborious way of gathering for man's benefit the bounty of heaven. It is therefore that we must unite with your pleasures and repose the opportunities for exchange of ideas and the dissemination of practical truths. A nation's material greatness cannot be better gauged than by the condition of her agriculture. National growth in wealth, population and inter-state importance keeps steady pace with growth in husbandry. Our own country and commonwealth present a marked proof of this truth if any were needed.

The average annual export of wheat from America for the years 1793, 1799 and 1770 was about 810,000 bushels. The value of the wheat export for the year 1879 was over $130,000,000. The value of the tobacco exported from North America in the year 1879 was over $90,000,000, and was more than seven times the value of the whole export in the same year. In 1879 the value of the tobacco exported was about $35,000,000 and the wheat export was about $100,000,000. The value of the grain exported from the several American provinces, the islands of Newfoundland, Bahama and Bermuda in the year 1770 was $245,208. In 1880 the value of the grain exported from the United States was over $175,000,000. In 1881 the value of breadstuffs and provisions exported from the whole United States was less than $13,000,000, while the breadstuffs alone exported in 1881 was over $370,000,000.

Pennsylvania's Agricultural Growth. As to our own commonwealth, a comparison of times and figures show a growth equally enormous and gratifying. In a memorial addressed to the Legislature of our state in 1791 by the society for promoting the improvement of roads and inland navigation it is stated that in the year 1790, 150,000 bushels of grain were brought down the Susquehanna and passed through Middletown on the way to Philadelphia. The same memorial states that Northumberland county shipped 30,000 bushels of wheat in Philadelphia in 1790. The present counties in Pennsylvania then embraced in Northumberland produced over 2,000,000 bushels of wheat and 4,000,000 bushels of Indian corn.

The very county of Cumberland in which we meet to-day shipped, it is estimated, in the year 1790, less than 20,000 bushels of wheat, while in 1880 there were produced in this county over 800,000 bushels of wheat, almost a million and a quarter bushels of Indian corn, also 52,000 tons of hay, 144,000 bushels of potatoes and nearly a half million bushels of tobacco. In 1879 the value of breadstuffs and provisions shipped from Philadelphia was over $30,000,000, or nearly two and a half times as much as the value of the same export from the entire United States in 1821. The produce of the state in wheat and corn had risen from 47,800,500 bushels in 1843 to almost 100,000,000 bushels in 1880; in potatoes from a trifle over 9,150,000 bushels to above 16,200,000; in hay from about 1,900,000 tons to more than 2,800,000, and in tobacco from less than 500,000 to nearly 37,000,000 pounds.

I would not weary you unnecessarily with figures to show how marvelously over our own beloved state and the whole country has grown on these important material concerns that engage the attention of so many of our citizens, and the pursuit of which constitutes the vocation of most of those in this assembly. Such growth is a just subject for pride as indicating the prosperity of this elder sister of human industry and main stay of a people's grandeur. That the cultivators of the soil, therefore, should organize for their improvement and protection is much to be commended, and is a cause for hearty congratulations. Good results to the state must flow from all such efforts to advance the condition of the husbandman.

The Number of Farms in the State. Gratifying as the figures I have given must be to the minds of all thoughtful citizens there is another fact in connection with agriculture that more than any other is a cause for sincere rejoicing. The total number of farms in Pennsylvania in 1880 was 127,000, covering 1,200,000 acres and their average size was 203 acres. In 1880 there were 213,500 farms embracing nineteen and three-quarters of a million of acres and the average size of the farms was 134 acres. That is while from 1850 to 1880 the number of farms in a farm land has been about 30 per cent. the number of separate farms has increased about 70 per cent. and their average size has decreased nearly 35 per cent. This shows that the tendency of our agriculture has not been to put the land of the state in the possession of a few enormously rich proprietors, but by decreasing the size and multiplying the number of farms to foster a numerous, prosperous and independent yeomanry with hearths, homes and plenty of their own. May we not, therefore, with thankful hearts to the God of bread, feel a glow of satisfaction and state pride in contemplating so happy a condition of our people, and resolve by study, attention and industry to cultivate and perfect that interest which produces the bread of life? Let us, therefore, present no problem more important than the distribution of the public burdens in such a manner that the toil of the husbandman shall bear the least possible exaction required by a proportionate contribution of all to the expense of government.

Whatever new avenue for labor, the employment of capital or speculative industry, the ingenuity, discoveries and multiplied inventions of these latter days have developed, it must be remembered that agriculture is now, as it has been and always will be, the most certain and lasting source of wealth and power. The greatest because the most constant of producers, she at the same time taxes the resources of government the least for her maintenance. She is the most self-sustaining because the most independent of all human industries. Her sons are at once the most conservative element on the political morals, habits and means of a people. Therefore, in these busy, modern days, when more demonstratively and turbulently sources of occupation are engaging the energies and vexing the acquisitive of man government must not fail of vigilant watchfulness over that peaceful and steady pursuit in whose fruitful repose is found the sure springs of wealth, security and defense.

The Husbandman as a Citizen. All history, and our own in particular, has demonstrated that no class of the people more than the agricultural community has shown itself ready and capable of discharging the duties of citizenship with intelligence and courage. The husbandman has never failed his country, whether those duties called for the thoughtful discussions of public questions in councils or their decision at the ballot box, or the furrow and the ox in the stall or the plow and the field of the field of strife. From Bunker Hill to Appomattox the history of our country attests the labor and patriotism of the American farmer. And when war's red record has been closed who so calmly as he has returned again to peaceful toil, prepared to reap the bloody harvest of the sickle after having secured that of the sword? Despairing of glory, he has mingled with the fray a liberal and generous spirit in contributing of his substance for the defence and well being of his country. His life and his treasure both he has held at the service of his state. May these qualities forever continue to be the distinguishing attributes of all the people of this commonwealth. May wealth not make us sordid and while engaged in its acquisition may we always remember that its blossoms cannot be fully enjoyed except under a government where the laws are framed in wisdom, executed with impartiality and obeyed with fidelity. Your security and happiness consist in the preservation of the integrity and supremacy of your laws. If the pillar of your prosperity be shaken no amount of wealth can compensate for the injury. Let us not, therefore, be so much given over to attention to private affairs as to neglect those political duties which we owe to ourselves and our country and to our prosperity. Let us cherish a jealous and intelligent vigilance over our rights and let us all, whether in public office or private station, render and exact, by all and from all, a full, hearty and loyal support, obedience and respect to the laws and institutions of the land. She is buying her great and honored citizen, Judge Black is dead. In a few hours, as the sun goes down in his setting his parting rays will fall with mellow light upon the fresh turf that hides forever from human view the form of the chief justice whom Pennsylvania loved and the nation admired. As a jurist, as a statesman, as a scholar, as the friend of labor and a fearless denouncer of wrong, he did great service for his state and his kind and his name should be held in honored remembrance. An actor in stirring scenes and trying times in our history, he lived to see oblique reticence abashed and truth vindicate the purity of his purposes and the sincerity of his convictions. His death has impoverished us and bereft the nation. While the tolling bells sound solemnly in the hills of York it is fitting that we should pause a while to lament our loss and honor our worthy dead.
