

accrued to him by your judges he has repudiated that law.

If I should see the feet with your eyes, I think I had seen still stuck to the law, once heard a dresley say that, to his own power, under the "mediumship" of the famous flame, he saw his marbled centre table rise from the floor to the ceiling and come gently down again. I remarked to him, "I should like to see you believe in a meaning in spiritualism. He said: "No, I saw it, but didn't believe it."

It is easier to believe the eye deceived than the law, and in your account this Hoffman's report is a very desirable one. It is from being difficult to believe that after about 40 trials and failures the vigilance of the judges should have been sufficiently relaxed to enable Mr. Hoffman to deliver his ball, without detection, a little to the right of the first wire (more easily than if it had been a stake) after which all the rest would be easy enough to one who could throw a ball with precision between the wires. Unless Mr. Hoffman is purer than a "Canaan" wife, I shall have to indulge the suspicion that Mr. Hoffman played you some such trick. His striding forward and reaching out over the first "seven feet" gave ample ground for this suspicion.

It can be understood how the pitcher can impart a rotary motion to his ball, but there is a misconception as to its effect, as well as to that imparted to the ball. In neither case is an "axial" or "cork screw" rotation imparted to the ball, but in one case of the right ball a rotary motion of its longitudinal axis, and to the baseball a rotary motion around its absolute centre of gravity; the essential effect in both cases being to insure the nearest approach to a perfectly straight ball to the left of the centre of the ball to the left," would directly tend to prevent it from being so curved. If a ball were discharged from a gun barrel twisted like a cork screw, it would take a straight line—go off on a tangent—the instant it left the barrel, and to continue to move, according to the first law of motion.

With a view to an experiment I approached the captain of a baseball club here just a few minutes before receiving your letter. He set me back at the outset by saying that a pitcher is not a pitcher capable of throwing a ball in any other than a straight line was "honest," a judgment which you will pardon me for saying, I sitting upon the supreme bench of scientific law, am much inclined to affirm to you. He then showed me a pitcher capable of throwing a ball in any other than a straight line was "honest," a judgment which you will pardon me for saying, I sitting upon the supreme bench of scientific law, am much inclined to affirm to you.

Very respectfully yours, R. B. RITCHEY, JR.

This diagram may help to make one of my suggestions more clear. R. B. R.

Another Letter. NAVAL ACADEMY.

Dear Sir: Your letter came and I received yesterday, and the Lancaster INTELLIGENCER of the 27th to day. The explanation you have given of the cause of the curving of a baseball to the left is clearly correct. If the ball goes to the right, the axis of rotation would be the same (perpendicular to its line of flight), while its motion of rotation must be reversed—the left side must move forward and the right back. The effect of spinning a ball which is flying through the air around an axis perpendicular to its line of flight, would be to make the upper part of the ball moved forward, to decrease its angular velocity, to force it down; the reverse effect would be caused if the spin were reversed. The reason that the ball does not at first appear to curve is plain. It is the reason that a ball fell from a height appears at first to move slowly. The unequal pressures on the two sides of the ball cause a constant pressure (to the left axis) and it takes some time for the ball to acquire rapid motion in obedience to this push. When the pitchers can spin their balls around a horizontal axis perpendicular to the line of flight, they can cause balls to dip up or down at pleasure. As I thought it might interest you, I calculated, from the experimental data of Prof. B. H. Washburn, the force of the air opposed to a ball of 2.75 inches diameter, and with an axial head—the sides being struck with a radius 1/4 times the diameter. It will be one-fifth of a pound. The result, as to spherical ball will be greater, perhaps 12 thousandths of a pound. This is all supposing the velocity of the ball is 100 feet per second.

Yours very truly, J. F. MILES.

COURT OF COMMON PLEAS.

Business Done in the Second Week. This morning the second week of common pleas court began, with Judge Patterson presiding. When the list was called at 10 o'clock it was found that twenty-two of the thirty cases on the list were ready for trial.

In the case of Wm. S. Hastings vs. Marshall and Barbara Hastings, the plain defendant his wife whereupon the defendants plead surprise and the case was continued.

No other cases were disposed of this forenoon, and the jury was discharged until this afternoon. This afternoon the case of Mary Shuman, formerly Killinger, vs. the city, was again taken up in the lower court room before Judge Livingston. The evidence being all in contest began speaking.

The court ordered West Millin street to be opened as soon as the damages are paid to Mrs. Madigan, whom which assessment there has been appeal.

Emma Palmer, who was divorced from her husband, Lightner Palmer, on the grounds of desertion.

Shooter Dislocated. Mr. C. Bender, of the Fairmount hotel, on Saturday evening fell and dislocated his shoulder. The accident was not discovered until Sunday noon when the shoulder having become very much swollen, Dr. A. J. Burger was sent for under the idea that the old gentleman was suffering from an acute attack of rheumatism. Dr. Burger immediately pronounced it a dislocation and forthwith proceeded to administer ether, after which he reduced the dislocation.

Burglary. Last night thieves broke into the house of Samuel Mitchell, who keeps a toll gate on the Lancaster and Williamson turnpike, near Lemna place. The entrance was made by unbolting a shutter. The whole lower part of the house was ransacked and $15 in money and a watch was carried off.

Is He From Lancaster? John Derr, arrested at East Mahanoy Junction for picking pockets, gave "King street, Reading," as his place of residence but there is no such street in this city. The fellow evidently hails from Lancaster.

Death of an Old Quaker. Abraham Stricker, a well known citizen of Mount Joy, died last night. He was formerly a resident of Maytown but moved to Mount Joy several years ago. He was about 65 years of age and had several grown sons, his wife having died several years ago.

SCHOOL OPENED.

Three Thousand Children at Their Desks.

To-day the public schools of the city opened for the fall term after a nine weeks summer vacation. The streets have been thronged all day, especially before 9 o'clock this morning, with a large number of children, with all sorts of books and stationery, hurrying to and from the book stores and schoolrooms. Nearly all the school houses are filled, and some of them a good deal overcrowded, and it will require a few days hard work on the part of teachers and directors and some for bearance on the part of parents and children, before all are satisfactorily provided for.

One thing, however, the city may take pride in: the school accommodations in Lancaster are better than they have ever been before, and will compare favorably with those of any school district in the state. The girls high school and a few of the schools of lower grade are overcrowded, and additional room will have to be provided in the near future.

The board of directors are this and will no doubt take early measures to provide the necessary room.

The Prison Board. The prison directors held their monthly meeting this morning. The contract for food for the prison was awarded to Baumgardner & Jeffrey. Messrs. Hemple and Frain, of West Chester, each claimed the reward for the arrest of Frankford. After discussing the claims of each the petitioners were laid over until the next stated meeting when definite action will be taken.

Mr. Carter was appointed a committee to sell the fat hogs at the prison. Mr. Niseley was appointed to purchase shoats, and also to advertise for proposals for the furnishing of meat to the prison for four months.

President Weaver was authorized to call on Mr. Herr, the cigar contractor, and ascertain when he will resume operations.

The report of the prison was presented, read and approved. It showed that there is no smallpox in the institution.

Stroked Through a Bridge. On Saturday a horse belonging to Sturgis plowing mill was being driven out of Senne's lumber yard on North Prince street he broke through a small bridge in the street and it required a half hour's work to get him out safely.

The party of Philadelphia Knights Templar who organized under the name of the "Philadelphia Club," to attend the triennial convulse of the grand encyclopedia, returned to that city from California on Saturday.

A Mrs. Dunham, living in Michigan, brought suit in Philadelphia on Saturday against the Western Union telegraph company for failing to deliver to her at her distant home an answer to a telegraphic inquiry sent to her father in that city.

At Carlisle the grand jury spent Saturday afternoon in the case of a woman referred to the frauds perpetrated in the senatorial election of last November. Mr. J. W. Bosler, the contestant for Mr. Wagner's seat in the Senate, and many others who were subpoenaed, have given their testimony, but the investigation is not yet concluded. That the election laws have been boldly defied, is admitted by everybody, yet it is believed that thus far no evidence has been adduced which is sufficiently definite to indicate the criminal.

John Teahl committed suicide at Koehler's hotel, on South George street at York, Saturday evening by shooting himself through the head with a pistol. Teahl is a patent rights man, whose home is in Reading, where he has a wife and children. He went to his room, took a hand glass in one hand and a revolver in the other, and with the glass directed the fatal bullet to his brain. The ball passed through his head and flattened against the wall. He left a letter which said he did not feel like returning to his home, as he was miserable and "would only make them unhappy."

Ex county commissioner G. W. Walker was placed on trial Saturday on the charge of perjury at Litanon. Walker is charged with having violated his official oath as commissioner by having taken money from the county treasury then he was entitled to in payment for his service. The law allows $150 per day for each day actually employed in the performance of the necessary duty of the office. This is contended to mean 300 days altogether. He did not serve eighty days in any one year. In advising his not be claims that he had been exonerated by three lawyers to the value of $300.

Stroke His Leg. On Saturday evening as John Greymbill, residing near Boose's tavern at Sun Hill, Penn township, was riding on horseback, his horse stumbled and fell upon Mr. Greymbill, breaking his leg between the knee and ankle. He was carried to his home, where Dr. M. Dunlap attended him and set the broken bones.
