

Lancaster Intelligencer.

WEDNESDAY EVENING, SEPT. 5, 1883.

The Wooden Poles Must Go. The Examiner suggests that this journal and the New Era have concluded to let the poles go up, referring probably to the fact that we do not daily protest against them; nevertheless our opposition remains unchanged to the property holders and the city authorities, who have the power to keep the city from being deluged by these ugly poles.

The councils have undertaken to give the city the electric light; and to the lamp committee fell the work. The lamp committee did not know any thing about electric lights, but they had a company which was lighting the city with petroleum which was also in the electric light business; and this company told the lamp committee all about it and offered to put up the plant and provide the light for a year for a certain sum.

WASHINGTON city, which is rapidly becoming one of the most beautiful in the country, makes fertile protest against the continuance or further invasion of the ugly telegraph poles. They must go.

PEACHES are said to have reached so high a figure this year that the proprietors of the canning and drying establishments in some portions of Delaware have allowed them to remain closed, fixing it direct to their advantage to ship the fruit direct to the Northern market.

It is authoritatively stated that the Arthur administration has gone so far in its support of Mahons's readjuster coalition movement in Virginia, that to exit a retreat would be at the present time well nigh impossible.

RECEIVING pension papers in Iowa is the latest scheme by which advantage is taken of the needs of pensioners. The method of its working is for the pensioner to put the pension certificate in pawn in consideration of a loan from the pawn broker, ranging all the way from 25 to 35 per cent of the quarterly amount due the pensioner.

FRATERNITY OF THE STATE PRESS. The Germantown Telegraph says Levy the corner player is greatly overrated. The North American thinks it neither notable nor creditable that Judge Black left the cabinet in debt.

STATE CHAIRMAN COOPER is reported to have said in Bedford last night "in answer to Hensel's attack on Livsey as being an English soldier, that Powell, too, was an Englishman and the only difference between the two was that Livsey had also served as a soldier in the Union army. The Humes bill he claimed as a Republican measure."
