WEDNESDAY FVENING, SEPT, 5, 1882,

Europe Hungry for American Genius. That a prophet is not without honor save in his own country is being demonstrated by a young American who is now reaping laurels by the cartload in Berlin. This young man is known here as a play wright. His name, which yet lingers in big type at some of the country cross saved and along the most grown fences, is roads and along the moss grown fences, is Bartley Campbell. Probably no young man ever fought the fight of life more desperately or more vainly than did he for years. He produced plays with the fecundity of a Lope de Vega, and for the most part they were American plays, dealing with the life about him—not always with finesse, but generally with bravery and strength—and through most of them there ran a rough strain of elemental poetry. But the manager laughed him to scorn, the critic sneered at his homespun mate rial and the public were inclined to look upon him as a rather overweening fail-

But he kept on writing. Neither scorn nor neglect could intermit the stream of plays. Failing to obtain a manager be became his own manager, and thus got before the people. This put him on his legs, so to speak, and he began to make money. But he never succeeded in break-ing through the literary barrier and obtaining recognition as a dramatist. An impregnable prejudice against American drama pursued him everywhere. Mr. Bouceicault had risen to the altitude of genius on the stolen debris of the French Every theatre in the country was open to him, and every manager stood hat in band begging him to exert his genius and purloin something for that house. But the original stuff-they would none of it.

Then one day, after ten or fifteen years of struggle for recognition, Mr. Bartley Campbell rose up, shook the dust of Union Square from his feet and started for Ger many. It was a bold thing for this barn storming American playwright to do-to throw bimself into that sea of profound dramatic culture, where every minnow is a critic and every sardine a dramatist. A broad ripple of commiserating laughter ex tended from Printing House square to Peoria when it was known. What did the author of the "Galley Slave" and "My Partner" propose to do in the land of Goethe and Shiller and Kotzebue? There was a great deal of pity felt for Campbell in anticipation of the mingled horror and amazement that his American rubbish would excite in the later Lessings of that transcendental domain. The result is a curious one. The Germans have hailed Mr. Campbell as a dra matist of genius. They positively like his American rubbish. Those very elements which were deprecated here as rude and vulgar and shallow are there pronounced to be natural, fresh and vigorous. He is called the "Bret Harte of the drama," the most successful dramatic author of America," "the young genius of the Western stage," Philosophy is at his feet; the profound German intellect takes its hat off to him. The populace crowd to see his plays and the press concedes to him a place of honor among the great playwrights of the era.

This result is so pronounced and so unexpected that it opens a wide field of spec-ulative thought. Why after all may not the recognition of genius be only a ques-tion of locality, and why may not hun dreds of other struggling and neglected men of brains in America find recognition and henor by changing their basis? Why, for example, would it not be a judicious move for Mr. Chas. Gayler, another American playwright, to go to Greece, and once on Attic soil, amid the traditions of Æschylus and Euripides, secure that henor which is impossible in his own country? It is just possible that the critics of Paris would hail with special delight such fresh and simple geniuses as are the authors of the "Farmer's Daughter" and "Her Atonement," and Mr. Augustin Daly himself might reverse the verdict of mankind by moving from Broadway to the Latin Quarter.

A GHASTLY DISCOVERY.

I we Dead Infants Found in the Cesspool of a Public School.

Two colored boys ran up to Officer Ferguson at Sixth and Lombard streets, Philadelphia, Tuesday morning and n breathless baste informed him that they had seen a dead child in the closet of the public school house at Sixth and Minster streets. The officer hastened to the spot and, tearing away part of the framework of the disclosed to view the body of a child. Procuring a rope the remains were made fast and brought to light. As the body was drawn out the spectators were horrified to behold the corpss of another infant, which had been hidden by the first. They were both placed on the floor of the closet and the coroner notified. The re mains are those of colored children. The elder, which is that of a male child, is about five months old, with black features and clad in a single garment. The younger is of very light color and probably about two months old. The place was quickly surrounded by a large and exited mob and a detail of police from the Union street station had to be made to clear the streets and preserve order. The bodies were in a good state of preservation. The affair has caused great excitement among the colored population, which is large in the neighborhood. The to tool, which is for colored children only, was opened on Monday.

MURDER IN CLEVELAND.

James Ponobue Deliberately and Without Apparent Cauce Kills His Stepfather. At Cleveland, Tuesday morning, James Donohue, aged 25, deliberately and without apparent provocation shot and killed stepfather, Michael O'Connell, aged A short time before the tragedy Donohue went to his trunk and took from it a revolver. His mother urged him to put the weapon back, but he threatened to shoot her if she interfered. Then he sat on a lounge in the sitting room, revolver in hand. Presently his stepfather, a large man, came into the bouse, saw Donohue and, walking toward him, said : "James, give me the pistol." Donohue immediately rose to his feet and fired a ball through O'Connell's heart. He then lay down on the lounge, seemingly unreand unconcerned, O'Connell walked a few steps and fell dead. Mrs. O'Connell ran screaming out doors. policeman soon arrived, but Donohue stoutly resisted and had to be severely clubbed before he could be arrested.
