WEDNESDAY EVENING, SEPT. 19, 1883.

A Sound Veto. The governor has vetoed the concurrent resolution sent to him by the Legislature, which instructed its appropriation committee to report bills providing pay for the members up to September 10 and no pay after that date except to officers and employes.

The governor finds a further objection to the resolution in that it is contrary to the constitutional provision, which declares that the compensation of a public officer shall not be increased or diminished during his term of office.

is a disposition to be fair, and to refrain from claiming unjust party advantages in distributing the state.

The governor's veto was sustained in the Senate because the Republicans could not muster the thirty-four votes necessary to override it.

The constitution of the commonwealth in the twelfth section of the second article of the Legislature, says, "the yeas and nays of the members on any question shall be the record."

A PASTOR'S CRIME.

KILLING HIS WIFE AND THEN HISSELF.

Rev. James Kemble Stabs His Wife, and Then Himself. About 1 o'clock Sunday, the crowd moving up down Park street before the Atlantic bank in Brooklyn, N. Y., were shocked to see the body of a man with his throat cut from ear to ear fall upon the pavement.

Two or three of the persons who had seen the horrible suicide rushed upstairs to learn, if possible, something about the dead man. In the front room, on the fourth floor, they saw the body of a man lying on the floor by his side.

From what occurred it was evident that murder and suicide had been committed. The room presented a horrible and sickening appearance, the carpet being saturated with blood.

It appeared that Rev. Mr. Kemble had for some time been disturbed in his mind, partly from malady and partly from concern by his having been laid off by his church after vacation.

Rev. Mr. Kemble and his wife, Frances, had been but a few years married. He was thirty-five years of age. He was a son of Mr. Gordon Kemble, who was engaged in the office of the New York State Bank.

It is supposed that he had been disturbed in his mind, partly from malady and partly from concern by his having been laid off by his church after vacation.
