Seth Green's Ideas About the Finny Tribe and Some of His Varied Experiences.

(Turf, Field and Farm.) "How did you ever come to devise this "t have been working at H ever since I was

"I have been working at it ever since I was large enough to bend a pin."

The above remark was addressed to Mr. Seth Green, the veteran fish culturist, who is known to the entire world, and his reply indicates the extent of his labors.

"When I was quite young," he con funed, I would lie on the limb of trees that reached out over the water on ire afternoons wateh ng the movements of the that and studying their hists. In this way I discovered many characteristics which were before noknown. the life in the streams or this country would become extinct. To counteract this disastrous end became my life work, and I am happy tosay I have seen its accomplishment."

"Were you successful on the start?"

"No, Indeed. Up to that time all artificial attempts to latch and raise fish from the spawn had tailed, and I was compelled to experfinent in an entirety new manner. The work was a careful and technis one, but I innsily succeeded, and to day I am able to hatch and raise fully seventy-five per cent of all spawn."

"Enormous! Why, that is a larger percentage than either the vegetable or animal kingdoms produce in a natural condition."

"I know it, but we exercise the greatest care in the start, and goard the little follows until they become able to care for themselves."

The foregoing conversation occurred at Caledonia where the representative of this paper was paying a visit to the state fish hatcheries.

It has been his privilege to report very many interesting sights within the past twenty five years, but the view presented here exceeds in interest anything ever before attempted.
"How many fish are there in those p nds.
Mr Green?"

"As we have never attempted to count them it will be innered by the payer.

"As we have never attempted to count them it will be impossible to say. They ex-tend way up into the millions, though. We shipped over three millions out of the ponds this year and there seemed to be as many afterward as before. We have nearly every variety of the front family and many hy-

"You speak of hybrids, Mr. Green. What do you mean by that?"
"I have experimented for years in crossing the breed of the various fish and am -till working apon it. We cross the female salmon from with the male brook front, and thus reduce a hybrid. Then we cross the hybrid with the brook front, which gives us three quarter brook front, which gives us three quarter through the first makes one of the fine-t fishes in the world. He has all the habits of the brook front, lives in both streams and lakes, develops vermithen spots on his sides, rises readily to a fly, is far more vigorous and fully one third larger than ordinary brook front of the same age. The possibilities of development in the dish world are great and we are rapidly ascertaining what they are."

As the man of news watched the countenance of Mr. Green while he was giving the above account, he could not but lost that he was in the presence of one of the few hivestigators who, from a rich and line-long experiment than or those from a rich and line-long experiment than or those courte benefit to the world. you, that sickn as was something of which you knew nothing."

"And so it was until hast whater. I went down to Fiorida in the fail to see what kind of fish they had in that state and study their habits, and was attacked with malaria in its severestiorm, and when I came home I realized for the first time in my life that I was sick. My symptoms were terrible I had dull, aching palus in my head, limbs and around my back. My appetite was wholly gone and I tell a lack of energy such as I had often heard described, but never experienced. Any one who has ever had a severe attack of maintain and remarked there all the spring and if there is also admissed in the effect was no improvement to the seam, and often it was simply "horrible." But real artistic rantering was very pretty work, and a rantered seam it was almost impossible to "rip."

But the patient reader may say, "all this is interesting enough to those who feel interested in the obsolete customs of the past; still it does not illustrate what the "Apparently so. I keep the remedy on land if the while though and do not be fixte to ecommend it to others."

"One question more. How many ponds of set of front teeth, and a clean meanh, ligh have you have you have an interest."

"One question more. How many Londs of this have you bereamd how are they divided ?"
Well, we have 45 pends which are divided ap as follows: 22 pends of brook tront, 2 pends of salmen trout, 4 of McCioud river or rainbow trout, 2 pends of German trout, 3 of California mountain trout, 2 pends of hybrids, 4 of one-quarter salmen and three-quarters brook trout, 2 pends of gold fish, and 1 pend of carp. Then we have what we call the centential pond or than 15 hours, 15 consisting of crosses of different his, including Kennobec salmen, Land Locked salmen, California salmen, brook trout, salmen trout and hybrids. These fish range in size from intunows to 15 penanders, and in age from one antone half nose on range in size from one and one half ounders, and in age from one and one half outlisted leven years. I forgot to say, also, at we have a thospital pond, which is en-rely empty, which speaks pretty well for a omaginaty of meny millions, indeed the hole secret of fish culture can be summed four things. The numerous fish exhibitions which are taking place in all parts of Europeansi the unusual interest which is being manifested in this subject throughout the world all own their origin to the process above described as originated and conducted by Seth Green. It is certainly cause for congratulation to every American that this country produces so many men whose genius brings vanue to the world, and it is proof positive of the greatest merit that a remedy even with such righ standing as Warner's rate Cure is known to have should be so strongly endorsed and recommended by so strongly endorsed and recommended to we so reputable and reliable as Seth Green.

Seaming " and " Rautering " ... something About an Old Custom Among the Tailors-The Tricks of the Talue.

Written for the INTELLIGENCES. "I'was something - 'tis nothing." How many tailors of the present day can execute, skillfully, the delicate manipulation known among the ancient craft as "rantering?" How many, except those of the old regime know what the term means? How many have ever heard of many others could with the most approit? And yet, half a century ago, any occupant of the shopboard who did not know the full import of "rantering" would have argued himself unknowing and unknown. True, there was no special | years buried in a common grave. use in rantering, and if it was not well executed it would have been far better to have omitted it; but then it was not omitted, and to become profict at in it, of course, involved some excusable attempts in the beginning Rantering was confined to only a few seams in a coat, and no reason could be assigned why these seams should undergo that slow, tedious and difficult process and others not. It was latter was shot through the collar bone mainly confined to the trousers seam at the and killed almost instantly. The trouble waist of the garment, and curious enough, if there was a flap at the waist, the flaphead between the families of the Howes and was never rantered, but only the remainder Butlers for ten years. During that period of the waist seam, from the hand and front several quarrels have taken place between the young members of each. Tuesday the arbitrary limit of rantering. Very fretwo Butlers and three of the Howe quently when there was a " wheel piece ' on the skirt of a surfect, or freek coat, that seam was also rantered. When the between the families was revived. A front end of the collar was not "top felled" on the roll, it was also seamed and rantered by some of the trade. [Fifty years ago, there were few, if any, mer- was burt seriously. Sometimes the quantity was more ample than necessary, but other in the collar bone and killed him almost times it was quite the reverse, and then rautering was of some account for it enabled the tailor to piece the garment where it could not be seen—at least not while it about twenty-six years of age, of splendid was new. But all this is changed now.] The object of rantering was to hide the seam as much as possible, and hence it was also employed, when an unusual piece became necessary in such part of the gar ment where a naked seam would have been too conspicuous. It was much easier to execute rantering in a seam that ran across the grain of the cloth than in one that rau parallel with the grain. Rantering belonged to the "raw-odge" epoch of tailoring, and both disappeared almost simultaneously. It was confined to grain-faced cloths and cassimeres, but fine satinets also admitted of it. Some attempted it on cloths without a grain, even

"It seems hardly possible. How did you come to recover so completely?"

"My brother, who had been all fetted by a severe kidney trouble and threatened with Bright's discases was completely cured by a remety in which I had streat confidence. I fleerefore tried the same rementy for my man to day and through the instrumentatity of Warner's SafetGare, which I had been all a ma well man to day and through the instrumentatity of Warner's SafetGare, which I believe to be one of the most valuable of meshelines. Indeed, I see it is endorsed by the United Sates mentical college of New York, and that Dr. Gunn, dean of that institution, has written a long article concerning flevalue."

"Apparently so, I keep the remedy on land the provided the operator possessed a good thumb nail; but to bite up a seam, skill otherwise the shopboard might have pronounced it "chewed up." A seam pitter up was afterwards also scratched up, or rubbed up, and these manipulations were for the purpose of loosening or disengaging the fibers of the grain that had been clasped by the sewing. A seam treated in this manner was afterwards easier to press apart, was less compleuous and did not raise" as readily as one that was not so treated. After this preparation the process of rantering was begue. We must however, mention another important preliminary. Three kinds of acodles were usually em played by mechanical tailors haif a century ago, and these were sharps, blunts and betweens. The best canterers used a No. 7, 8 or 9 abarp-under any circumstances never a blunt, as this would have ruptured the superficial liber and marred the general effect. With a fine needle and work of rantering proceeded. This was is answered in three words—Take Hop Bitwork of rantering proceeded. This was accomplished by entering the needle just beneath the face of the cloth, and drawing it "back and forth" across the seam, thus drawing the edges together, in order to hide the seam, and the more effectually it was hidden, the more skillful was deemed the operation. From whence the term rantering was derived, we do not

To rant was a dramatic effect that was overdonein excess of normal or natural-and one was called a "ranter." We may imagine a parallel in rautering, because it was in excess of plain seaming, and at the present

But this is a digression, or at least not exactly germain to the subject of rantering. In the "raw edge" epoch of tailoring, there were some very ex pert ranterers, but by far the greater number of those who practiced the art were only "so-so," if they were not con-summate "bunglers." Conspicuous among these experts, about the period when we

"Rawedge Wallace" and "Steve Plester," only the latter of whom we ever had the pleasure of seeing and knowing And here we desire to distinctly note that the tramps of that period had not the remotest affinity to the tramps of the present period. Being long anterior to the advent of canals and railroads they often tramped "afoot" from Maine to Louisiana, only sojourning long enough in the intervening towns and villages to "raise a stake" to carry them
