STOVES, HEATERS, ETC.

STOVES! STOVES!

During the past week we have received the largest stock of Cook and Parlor Stoves, Ranges and Heaters ever brought to Lancaster city; they are all from the best manufacturers, and we guarantee every stove we sell. Having just completed two new stories to our already large store, we devote one of these to the exhibition and sale of stoves exclusively, and would be pleased to have our customers call and see our large and varied stock. We have the Celebrated Adams & Westlake Coal Oil Stoves, with Heater attached, which we are selling cheap; they are a good article and just the thing for a sick room. We have also a very large assortment of Zinc and Crystal Stove Boards, which we are selling at low prices. Our stock of Floor Oil Cloths never was so large and never contained so many choice patterns as now; we have some beautiful patterns in one yard wide for 25 cents per yard and up.

MEDICAL.

WHEELER'S REMEDIES.

RESPONSIBLE MEN

And Women know ere this that of the many diseases and derangements of the body each has a separate cause or origin, and that each needs a different remedy. It is a common error to effect a cure, and a moment's reflection will convince that any of the quack nostrums foisted upon the public, must be of a nature to produce a number of diametrically different diseases, and that a cure, even if it do not call them humbugs.

POOR PEOPLE

and people of moderate means, and even people who do not wish to pay for a cure, can do so by using Wheeler's Remedies. These remedies are of a nature to cure every disease, and to restore the system to its normal condition. They are of a nature to cure every disease, and to restore the system to its normal condition. They are of a nature to cure every disease, and to restore the system to its normal condition.

RHEUMATISM

Gout, Lameness of Joints, Scurvy and Neuritis are relieved at once and positively cured by the use of Wheeler's No. 26 Remedy. It is a common error to effect a cure, and a moment's reflection will convince that any of the quack nostrums foisted upon the public, must be of a nature to produce a number of diametrically different diseases, and that a cure, even if it do not call them humbugs.

SUFFERING WOMEN

Many a lady, endowed by nature with a pretty face, beautiful figure, fair complexion, as well as the sweetest disposition, and all the mental qualities grows prematurely old, and wrinkles appear on her forehead, and around the eyes, the complexion becomes sallow, the bright eyes lose their lustre, and a feeling of languor takes the place of her former vigor. This is due to the fact that the system is deranged, and the blood is impure. Wheeler's Remedies will cure this, and restore the system to its normal condition.

OVER THE SEA.

SITUATION OF CHINA AND FRANCE

The Former Rejects Several of the French Proposals--Reported Shooting of a French War Vessel in the East.

It is common report at Paris that the reply of China to France's memorandum has been received, and that several of the proposals of France have been rejected by China. A dispatch from Hong Kong to London's telegraphic company, dated the 25th, reports that pending troubles in Canton, the Chinese minister of foreign affairs, Prince Minister Fery held conference Wednesday and Thursday with the Marquis Tseng, the Chinese ambassador.

Roumania's New Allies.

Advices from Algiers state that two French transports were called for by Roumania with a battalion of the foreign legion and two companies of sharpshooters, a total of 2,000 men.

M. Bratiano, prime minister of Roumania, has had a conference with the Emperor Francis Joseph, after having rejected the proposals of the Emperor.

It is generally considered that Roumania's entry into the alliance has been effected.

Shaw's Own Story.

Mr. Shaw, the British missionary, in an address at London Thursday night, described the ill-treatment he had sustained at the hands of the French officials at Tamatave, amidst frequent cries of "shame" from the audience. He denied that he had been sent for by Lord Granville, and that he had been treated as a prisoner of war.

War Threatened in the East.

At Constantinople, the Porte is preparing a circular to the powers declaring that if Bulgaria lapses into a state of anarchy Turkey will exercise her right of sovereignty in that country for the restoration of order.

Russia Watching Bulgaria.

The Journal de St. Petersburg regards the situation in Bulgaria as dangerous. It is reported that the Russian government will issue a note to the European powers, taking exception to the recent changes in the government of Bulgaria, by which Prince Alexander removed the Russian ministers, General Soboleff and Kaulbars, and placed M. Zankoff, a Liberal, at the head of his cabinet. Soboleff and Kaulbars are on their way to St. Petersburg now.

King Alfonso's Coronation.

A majority of the newspapers at Paris deprecate the exhibition, on the part of the people, of anything resembling open resentment--upon the occasion of King Alfonso's arrival at Paris--at his majesty's acceptance of the colony of a regiment of German Uhlans. The Temps expresses the opinion that Prince Bismarck intended by the appointment of King Alfonso to the colony to prepare a cold reception for the king upon his arrival in France, and urged the Parisians by their conduct to thank the king enters the city, to upset these calculations. King Alfonso is on his way to Brussels. The Crown Prince Frederick William and Prince William attended him to the railway station. Holding him a loyal and devoted subject, King Alfonso expressed his hope that they would soon have the pleasure of welcoming a member of the imperial family of Germany to their country.

Parisi Reported Shot.

A report comes from London that Mr. Parnell has been shot, but needs confirmation. Inquiry is being made as to its correctness.

A Dispatch from Dunganum, county Tyrone, states a covered car containing a supposed Parnellite was fired into, and the occupants were not hurt. This probably explains the report that Mr. Parnell had been shot.

It was stated at London this morning that Parnell was shot through the body.

A dispatch to the New York Herald says: "Mr. Parnell was to have left Dublin for London by the evening train, but in the London morning papers confirmatory of the rumor. At any rate it is certain that Mr. Parnell is wounded. It is stated that the bullet went through his body. Another account says the affair was accidental. No further details have been received."

The nationalist meeting at Dunganum, Ireland, passed resolutions expressing confidence in Mr. Parnell, demanding home rule and claiming that the land act failed. The members of the meeting, were the principal speakers. At the conclusion of the meeting they were escorted to the railway station by soldiers and police. Mr. O'Connor was attacked at Portadown, county Armagh, by Orangemen, but escaped unhurt.

AN OCEAN STEAMER LOST.

The Rotterdam Stranded on the Coast of Zealand No Lives Lost. A London special says: The steamer Rotterdam, of the Netherlands-American steam navigation company, was stranded at noon to day in the Benjaard, and lies in a bad condition.

The Benjaard, on the coast of Zealand, contains a large number of sand banks, one of which, the Zeeoendersplaat, the Rotterdam lies stranded. In conversation with a reporter, Mr. Cazaux, the general agent of the Netherlands-American navigation company, says: "The spot on which the vessel is stranded is about two hours' distance from Zierikzee. I received the following dispatch this afternoon: 'AMSTERDAM, Sept. 27.--To CAZAUZ, New York--Rotterdam stranded. Passengers landed. Vessel's crewing disabled. The Rotterdam is an iron screw steamship, with spar deck and five bulkheads. Her net registered tonnage is 1,152, her gross tonnage 1,634. She is 234 feet 8 inches long, 35 feet 6 inches beam, and 12 feet 3 inches depth of hold. She was built at Redferr, Scotland, and is owned by the Netherlands-American steamship company. She has had a long and successful career between Rotterdam and New York, and has proved herself a capable sea boat and a reliable sailor. On November 3, she went aground on entering the River Maas, near Maasluis, on her trip from New York to Rotterdam, and was subsequently floated without difficulty.'

A Good Short Story.

A short story that is actually good is a luxury, and what is more thoroughly enjoyable, when one has an hour's leisure, than to meet with an interesting tale that will just occupy that time? There is a scene of satisfaction about it not often to be derived from the choicest novel. In Harper's for October, there is a little story entitled "The Wood Nymph, a Sculptor's Romance," by T. H. Hopkins. It is one of the most charming tales I have met in years; it sparkles with fun, and yet there is a depth of sentiment in it. Novels have been spun out of far less material than is contained in the half a dozen pages of "The Wood Nymph." The story is of the young daughter of a man, who, while a pupil at the South Kensington (London) school, lives with a couple of maiden aunts and who, while presumably practicing her art lessons, perched on the limb of a tree in the old English garden, dived into a romantic flirtation with a young sculptor who has rented a studio in the adjoining grounds, which commanded a full view of the garden and the oak in which Lady Mary studied nature in the pages of Damas. The acquaintance begins by the sculptor stealing a surreptitious glance at the drawing upon which the embryo artist is intent. It is a cow she is endeavoring to trace, from memory, and as the sculptor looks upon the singular apparition he is surprised into the exclamation, "Sister of Correggio, she has left out the tail!" Lady Mary submits humbly to the criticism, saying she "thought there was something wrong with the animal," and even ventures to ask how the mistake may be rectified. He is, of course, very willing to show her, but as he says, "I am really afraid you have hardly left room to put it in"--whereupon the artist acquiesces--"unless it was a very little tail," and as the cow is a very big cow, the difficulty is surmounted by the addition of an extra piece of paper to the drawing. To be brief, the sculptor sketches the girl as a model as she sits in the oak tree, and the work makes his fame and his fortune. He has, of course, fallen in love with his charming model, and knowing her rank, and the objection is apparently reciprocated. Their meetings are all clandestine, in the shade of the old garden, and are brought to a sudden end by the lynx-eyed aunt, Lady Mary is duly sent home. Her father, the marquis, is anxious to have her married to her cousin, the statue of "Wood Nymph," at an art exhibition, and struck with the resemblance of his daughter and the merit of work, sends for the artist and orders him to model a bust of his daughter, who is about to be married to her cousin, the Earl of Broadlands. The artist is naturally astonished to find the young noblewoman and his fair model one and the same. Finding his love for her unchanged, as soon as the bust is fairly started he rushes away from her, and longer on to be recalled, months later, by the indulgent father, who has yielded to his daughter's persuasions, and accepts the now famous sculptor as his son-in-law, the fiancee, the earl, having obligingly drunk himself to death from the moment of her departure. It is nothing new, in the method of unfolding there is delightful novelty.

A WIFE'S TROUBLE.

For a number of years my wife has been troubled with chronic rheumatism, it being in some portion of her body constantly (except perhaps in the very warmest weather in summer). Last Christmas she contracted a very severe cold, and a diseased condition of the kidneys became manifest, which subjected her to excessive suffering, as the symptoms of gravel become more prominent, her urine being colored, accompanied by a heavy brick-dust sediment, which she was obliged to strain after trying several remedies without relief. I procured for her a bottle of Hunt's Remedy, which she commenced taking, and before three days had passed she became much better. She continued using the medicine until she had used six bottles, and now feels entirely cured of both rheumatism and kidney complaint. She believes her present excellent health due solely to the use of Hunt's Remedy.

QUALIFYING RESULTS.

Under date of May 11, Mr. E. A. Thomson, of 75 Green street, New Haven, Conn., writes as follows: "I have been afflicted with gravel all my life with kidney disorders, and an examination of my urine showed a very diseased condition of my kidneys, and I had also symptoms of a diseased state of my liver. The passing of my urine was accompanied with severe pains in the small of the back and loins, followed by a burning sensation, and after having stood while in the vessel, the urine showed a very heavy deposit of a sediment similar to ground brick-dust, and, in short, I found that I was in such a diseased condition as to require immediate medical treatment, and as I was anxious to obtain the best and most speedy remedy I looked and inquired carefully, and became satisfied that Hunt's Remedy was an article of excellent merit, and therefore I procured a bottle, and before I had taken one bottle I found such a great improvement that I decided to continue its use, and by taking only two bottles the result has been most gratifying to my mind and body. I feel as if I have ordered a supply of Hunt's Remedy for my store, and shall hereafter have it for sale, as I consider it an excellent article for diseases of the liver and kidneys."

AN ANECDOTE OF AARON BURR.

The Recollections of a Lady who Felt the Charm of His Piercing Eyes. St. Louis Republican.

In New York city a few weeks since died Miss Theodosia Burr Davis, in her seventy-seventh year, only sister of Col. George T. M. Davis, well known to some of the older residents of St. Louis as formerly a prominent member of the Democratic party, and a general James Churchill in the Mexican war, and in 1849-51 editor of a newspaper in St. Louis. Miss Davis was a lady of brilliant and highly cultivated intellect, fine conversational powers and remarkable energy. Though tried by disappointment and sorrow, she was never depressed, and her vivacity and wit almost to the last, while by a life which was, in no respect, less than a life of heroic deed, she won and kept the esteem and affection of a large circle of relatives and friends. Her virtues, however, were so entirely domestic and private that the only excuse for this brief notice is the fact that she was indirectly connected with an historical personage in whom the public is always interested.

The father of Miss Davis was the young aide who was left to the guardianship of his brother, Matthew L. Davis, the intimate friend and biographer of Aaron Burr--one of that little band of devoted adherents who never abandoned their unfortunate chief, and who were known in those days as "Burr's Tenth Legion." Though she bore the name of his beloved daughter and was the niece and ward of a man so closely associated with him, Miss Davis never saw Burr but twice. The first meeting was a profound impression upon her, as we will explain. She was at her uncle's house, spending a portion of a school vacation, when one morning, when she was upstairs, he called to her to come down as there was a visitor who wished to see her.

For some reason she never could explain, she had an unaccountable dread of this unknown visitor, and did not at once obey the summons. It was repeated with emphasis which put an end to further hesitation, and she came down. Mr. Davis took her by the hand and they entered the parlor. There she saw sitting on the sofa, a little old man, dressed in the fashion of a past generation, with hair as white as snow and eyes so lustrous and piercing that she could not resist their fascination. With the stately courtesy of the ancient Roman, he turned and led her toward the stranger and said: "Colonel Burr, this is the child of whom I spoke. I need not tell you whose name she bears."

The old man rose, and grasping both her hands in his held her at arm's length, gazing into her face with those marvelous eyes as if he would read her very soul. The ordeal lasted but a moment, though it seemed an age to the timid girl; then her hands were dropped, and Burr exclaimed, in faltering voice: "Take her away, Matthew! I cannot stand it!"

She hurried past without speaking, but Burr stopped, and as she looked round she saw his eyes following in a long, wistful gaze, as if they would draw back to him the bearer of that beloved name.
