

Lancaster Intelligencer.

MONDAY EVENING, OCT. 1, 1883.

THE WHITE HERON'S DEATH. The wind drove faintly from the south, Like breath blown from a sleeper's mouth...

Through graceful curves he swept above The gloomy, moss-hung cypress grove: Then gliding down a long incline He flashed his golden eye on mine.

Half-turned, he poised him in the air; The prize was great, the mark was fair. I raised my bow and steadily drew The silken string, until I knew

My trusty arrow's barbed point Lay on my left forefinger's joint. Until I felt the feather seek My ear, swift drawn across my cheek.

Then from my fingers leapt the string With sharp recoil and deadly ring, Closed by a sibilant sound so shrill, It made the very water thrill!

Like twenty serpents bound together Hissed the flying arrow's feather!

A thud, a puff, a feathery ring, A quick collapse, a quivering, A whir, a headlong, downward dash, A heavy fall, a sudden splash,

And like white foam, or giant lake Of snow, he lay upon the lake.

WHYER OF THE TWAIN? A warrior, waiting for a fight, Was fronted by a fearful shape; "Turn back," it said, "thou shalt escape; Advance, and thou shalt meet thy fate!"

Two women on the city's wall Could see the warrior from afar, Could see the shape his pathway bar, Could faintly hear the menace fall.

One cried: "Ah, could he see me here He would return 'twould not be wrong." The other prayed: "May he be strong To do the right and not to fear."

There met him at the city's gate A throng of friends with greetings warm; They thought of naught but that the form They loved was spared to them by fate.

At sight of her who foremost came He half forgot remorse and shame; But she who uttered the deep prayer Had gone apart and bowed her head.

Why He Descend? True, you are in a miserable condition—you are weak, pale, and nervous. You cannot sleep at night, nor enjoy your waking hours; yet, why lose heart?

Do You Believe It? That in this low there are scores of persons passing their store every day whose lives are made miserable by indigestion, dyspepsia, sour and distressed stomach, liver complaint, constipation, when for 75c we will sell them Shiloh's Kidney Pills, guaranteed to cure them.
