MACHINERY.

HAVING DISSOLVED PARTNERSHIP and permanently closed the Chestnut Street Iron Works, I desire to inform my old patrons and the public generally that I am still in the business, being located in the Penn Iron Company's Works, North Plum Street, where I am making iron and brass castings of every description, and will be pleased to serve all who may favor me with their patronage. From 40 years experience in the business and using the best material and employing the best mechanics, I can guarantee to give entire satisfaction. Castings made from a mixture of iron and steel which are more reliable for strength and durability than the best cast iron known. V. teeth roll pinions, rolls and rolling mill work a specialty. Castings made of very soft iron, and brass castings of every description. I have all the patterns and all the machinery known to the trade. Also on hand, in complete stock, all the machinery for years, manufacturing them to give satisfaction. J. E. ROTHE, No. 57 North Queen Street, Lancaster, Pa.

STENGER'S SPEECH.

MASTERSHIP PRESENTATION OF FACTS.

Secretary Stenger's Irrefragable Arguments in Favor of Democratic Government.

—A Warning to the Nation of Republican Misdoings.

The following speech was made by Secretary of State Stenger, in Lafayette Hall, Pittsburgh, on Saturday evening, Oct. 6:

The Gulf between the inauguration of the last Democratic Government of Pennsylvania and the present Democratic Government is just a quarter of a century wide. The contest of 1857 resulted in the election of William F. Packard, the Democratic gubernatorial candidate. On the same day, the amendment to the constitution was carried, which provided for the creation of the present Sinking Fund. In January 1858, Governor Packard said in his inaugural address: "The people of Pennsylvania, by the recent adoption of an amendment to the constitution on the subject of public indebtedness, have imposed an imperative obligation upon their servants to practice economy, to limit expenditures, and to give their best efforts to the gradual but eventual extinguishment of the existing public debt. After eight years of experience under the Sinking Fund act of 1857, I am glad to say that the public debt has been reduced to a point which is not only safe, but honorable. The constitutional amendment, just adopted, demands the establishment of an effective Sinking Fund for its payment, and I shall consider it one of the leading duties of my administration to see that that amendment is carried out, both in its letter and its spirit."

The Legislature of 1858 had Democratic majorities in the Senate and House. They had come fresh from the people. They knew the sentiment in favor of the payment of the public debt. The doctrine that a public debt is a national disgrace had not yet been held sacred. They knew that the people had voiced their wish in the constitutional amendment which said: "To provide for the payment of the present debt, and any additional debt contracted as aforesaid, the Legislature shall, as its first duty, create a Sinking Fund which shall be sufficient to pay the accruing interest on such debt, and annually to reduce the principal thereof by a sum not less than $250,000."

They proceeded with alacrity to do the work commanded. On April 13, 1859, they passed an act which provided for the creation of the present Sinking Fund. It was a law by the signatures of a Democratic speaker of the Senate and the approval of a Democratic Governor.

The creation of the sinking fund was a Democratic measure, and when our Republican friends insist upon taking credit for the reduction of the debt, they may well take pause and ask of history what party it was that put this machinery in motion.

Parson M. Stenger, in a recent address, said in these latter days, Pennsylvania's Governors and Legislators have not been so prompt to do the bidding of the people. "The General Assembly at its first session after the adoption of this constitution, and immediately thereafter, the Legislature, by a large majority, shall appropriate the state in senatorial and representative districts," is the command of the sovereign people; and yet since the last census no appropriation has been made, and an Independent Stewardship has been established, which is a violation of the constitution.

Fourteen minutes each week by the clock is all the time that Republican Senators are willing to give to the performance of their sworn duty, and the bosses have the effrontery to ask the people to approve of a law which is a violation of the fundamental law.

Between the close of Governor Packard's term of office and the beginning of the present administration, a period of twenty-two years of Republican rule intervened, and during that time the treasury was almost continuously under the control of Republicans. And I charge to-night, that during this long period, not one dollar of interest upon the large sums from time to time in the sinking fund and the general revenue fund, has been paid to the people. Do you call that good management? Has this great trust been administered in the interest of the people? Certainly not.

By the constitutional amendment of 1857 and the sinking fund act of 1859, the public debt was to be paid from time to time by the proceeds of the sale of the state, or any part thereof, and of the income, or proceeds of sale of stocks owned by the state, together with other funds or resources that might be designated. It was provided that the sinking fund should be increased from time to time, by a sum not less than one per cent of the tax on other revenues of the state, and that the sinking fund should be increased from time to time, by a sum not less than one per cent of the tax on other revenues of the state, and that the sinking fund should be increased from time to time, by a sum not less than one per cent of the tax on other revenues of the state.
