SURPLUS REVENUE. REPUBLICAN SCHEME TO "DIVIDE." Specch of Senator Wallacs at York, Tues

day-An Old Destrine Revived by the mepublicans.

The Democracy held a rousing meeting in the court house at York Taesday. Early in the evening the young men's club par-aded the streets, clad in uniforms and bearing torches. The speakers were escorted to the court house by the club. The building was crowded to overflowing. Chairman Geesey called the meeting to order and Robert J. Fisher was chosen president The venerable judge accepted the honor in a feeling address. The first speaker introduced was Fenator William A. Wailace, who in an elequent manner held the vast andience for one hour and was frequently interrupted by applause Willis Bland, of Reading, and J. W. Parker, of Mifflin, also addressed the meeting. This will be the last Domotratic meeting in York of the campaign. Mr. Wallace spoke as follows :

Senator Wallace's Sprech. The Republican party of Pennsylvania at its convention of 1883 adopted the fol-lowing as the second plank in its platform:

"That any surplus in the public treasury arising from a redundant revenue should, after paying the national debt as fast as its condition permits, be distributed from time to time to the several status upon the basis of population, to relieve them from the burdens of local taxation and provide means for the education of their people."

This is the resurrection of a doctrine which for nearly lifty years has been dead and buried, and its reproduction now has amazed alike the opponents of that party and thousands of its adherents. It teaches the fallacy that the federal government has the power and ought to tax the people to obtain money to redistribute to them. We might have supposed that this was the idea of some doctrinaire, whose vagaries were engrafted on the platform in order to reconstruct and to comfort him in his return to party lines, and was intended to be silently ignered by the 'eaders and organs of the party. But in the recent meeting at Lancaster, at which Senators Cooper and Stewart and Measure. Brosius and Niles were leading actors, Sanator Stewart used this language : "The Republicau success this year in Penusylvania means that Pennsylvania will march forward with her sister states next year for the election of James G. Blaine to the presidency; it means the indersement of the idea of dividing the urplus revenues among the states." We cannot err as to the meaning of this language. It is too plain for misapprehension. A redundant revenue with all ts attendant oppressions and its redistri bution to the states, with all the corrupt ing and debasing results that are to follow is the plain policy of the Republican party of Pennsylvania. Success to them here upon this theory means its engraftment upon the national Republican platform of 1884 and the restoration to vigerous life disburse with the other for the mere pur-of the monster killed by Jackson in the latter days of his administration. It can as well say that the salaries of the officials In his eighth annual message President his hickory stick, in which the crowd vociferously joined. The orator of the evening was Samuel J. Randali. He began his address with the declaration that "the bottom rock of all political success is the ballot of the individual voter." He impressed upon the Democracy the necessity, both as a body and as individuals, of profiting by the advantages gained by the last campaign. "We have struggled for a quarter of a century to get just were we are," said Mr. Randall, "and we must not fail now when victory is within our grasp." The Republican party he considered far from being in "state of harmony vouchsafed by its leaders. The rank and file of the party," he said, "are tired of the corrupt and faithless administration of affairs by

If it can do this it can spend money which can be devised, of collecting revefor nue for the purpose of distributit. Congress is only author-to levy taxes, 'to pay the debts and provide for the common defence and general welfare of the United States. There is no such provisions as would authorize Congress to collect together the property of the country, under the name of revenue, for the purpose of dividing it equally or unequally among the states for the people. Indeed, it is not probable that such an idea even courred to the states when they adopted the constitution. But, however, this may be, the only safe rule for us in interpretelections. Federal money and federal power maintain control to day of 100,000 ing the powers granted to the federal government, is to regard the absence of express authority to touch a subject so important and delicate as this is, as

"Congress has no right under the constitution to take money from the people unless it is required to execute some one abuse of the power of taxation, and unjust and oppressive. It may indeed happen that the revenue will sometimes exceed the amount anticipated when the taxes were laid. When, however, this is ascertained, it is easy to reduce them; and, in such a case, it is unquestionably the duty of the government to reduce them, for no circum stances can justify it in assuming a power not given it by the constitution, nor in save those which have been plainly parted of to-day, and you are at liberty to publish the government.
