Picked up by the Intelitgencer Reporter. Hallow E'en was celebrated here in the usual manner, although a small number of girls participated in the evening's fun, or if they did, it was that fun carried on by the gentler sex within doors. Only one person was arrested during the evening, and that was a young man who endeavored to prevent a party of young ladies passing e Columbia engine house. Officer Gilbert interfered in the matter, and upon the youth becoming belligerent arrested him. He was released after being from the lockup after having been given a few boors for repentance.

Personal and Social. Mr. John S. Given, now of Philadelphia but formerly of this place, is visiting Mr.

Wm. B. Given. Last night a dancing party was held at the residence of Mr. Jacob Seibert, on Locust street. Wolfe's Columbia orchestra furnished the music for the twenty five couples that participated in the festivities.

"POP"

At Falton Opera House Last Evening. Rice's Surprise Party has attained an enviable reputation as a first-class comedy organization, but it cannot be said that any fresh laurels were gained in the pre-sentation of "Pop" last evening to a good sized audience. It appears that Mr. Rice has two companies known as the "Surprise Party," both of which adver-tise with the same bills. The company that has been playing in Philadelphia to crowded houses has made the reputation on which the inferior troupe of last evening are traveling. This deception cannot fail to hurt Mr. Rice in the estimation of the play going public, who are quick to resent artifices of this description. Of the performance given little can be said except that it bordered on the regions of the commonplace, with varying intervals, during the entire two hours and a half of its presentation. "Pop" is a meaningless alleged comedy, without beginning or end, which serves to introduce the specialties of the various members of the company. Perhaps the best part of the performance was furn ished by Mr. James B. Radeliffs, well and sang in capital style. Mr. W. H. Fitzgerald, formerly well known on the comic opera stage, essayed the leading part in last evening's extravaganza, that of Adolphus Pop, an impecunious playwright, and alleged comedian. As a comedian he becomes rapidly tiresome, although in justice to him it may be stated that the piece admits of few possibilities in that line Some of the singing was fair, but the whole performance left the impression of a company of untrained amateurs in their first appearance before the public.
