Hewitt on the Tariff.

The Albany Argus publishes an elaborate letter from Abram S. Hewitt, detailing his views upon the question of subject in the Democratic party, for which, as well as for himself, Mr. editions. Hewitt undertakes to speak. His views are particularly notable because high for their own interest. This fact forces the conclusion that manufacturers are not very enlightened men ; they know a great deal about manufactures, needed to make their business prospercus. The effect of a high tariff is to unduly stimulate business; when a large demand for goods arises, prices rise ; and if the demand grows sufficiently. prices advance till the foreign goods are more instructive assortment of religious news than the average mendicant let in over the high tariff.
