Of Making Books There Is No End." The social study "The Breadwinners" of mysterious authorship running through the Century for some time has been corcluded and is published in a volume of 319 pages from the press of Harper Brothers. The fact that the writer of it is not known The fact that the writer of it is not known—the obscurity of his or her identity being made the deuser by John Hay's resewed disclaimer,—has attracted more attention to the novel than it would otherwise have had. The story bears intrinsic evidence of being the handiwork of one skilled in other forms of writing than the construction of a novel and the constant wonder is that the author having done so well has not done better. He—it is certainly masculine—is probably reserving himself for the next book, which it may be taken for granted will come before the author's name.

Trollope's delightful autobiography, so frank and interesting, has been quickly succeeded by Lord Lytton's ("Owen Meredith") publication of his father's life and literary remains. The intense personality of Bulwer—not an attractive one—pervades the story from beginning to end, and the revelations will not change nor shock the popular estimate of the Euglish novelist formed from what has hitherto been known of his character or revealed in his own writings. The Frank-lin square editions in which it first appeared gave the Bulwer biography a wide reading, but it d serves the better form of cloth binding in which Harpers now issue it and of which the first volume is on sale at Luther Fon Dersmith's book store, East King street. Stakspeare's Folk Lore.

Of the various forms of Shakspearian study which have been engaged in and the result of which is found in whole libraries of Shakspeariana one of the latest, and by no means least valuable, is an examination of his text to discover the social histor of his text to discover the social fife of the Elizabeth age. Rev. T. F. Thistleton Dyer, A. M., author of "British Popular Customs Past and Present," is the author of "Folk Lore of Shakspeare," a compilation of the copions Shakspearian references to the manners and customs of the times in which the great dramatist lived and of his manifest knowledge of the folk lore of bygone days. The work has been so well done that it is a most valuable contribution to English domestic history; and while the prevailing manners and customs, the familiar birds and plants and animals, the popular legends, sports and superstitions of that day are here traced through Shakspear's familiarity with them, many obscurities in his writings have light thrown upon them by the information in dustriously collated of manners, men and things in his day. Pp. 559, Harper

Recent Publications. W. I. Rolfe has concluded his series of Shakspeare's works with a critical volume of 166 pages on Titus Andronicus, the verity of which as of Shaksperian authorship he so strongly discredits that he had to overcome much reluctance to include it in his series. Scholars of English litera-ture will none the less be grateful that he undertook the work to which he brings rare critical powers, and his research and learning illuminate the text with which he has had to deal.

Wm. Blackie, the experienced carsman, is turning his athletic experience to good practical account in a series of books on calisthenics, the last of which, "Sound Bodies for Our Boys and Girls," abounds in practical directions for the physical im provement and bodily development in the youth of both sexes.

Harper Bros., continue to contribute to the healthful juvenile literature of the county by the publication of such volumes as James Otis' story of "Raising the Pearl." There cannot be too many of this growing class of children's books to take the place of the flashy literature which is spread broadcast over the country.

All the above from the prees of Harper

Bros., received from L. Fon Dersmith, book seller, East King street. The Newspaper Almanaca

The almanac issued by the Philadelphia Times this year is even ahead of the high standard established by former issues of this publication. In addition to the great variety of political and statistical information, which has been the feature of past years, the 1884 almanac has a history of the historic "extra session" and a summary of the state laws passed in 1883 For the small sum of fifteen cents the citizen who has no other handy means of finding out can here ascertain what new legislation he is living under and what the last General Assembly did not fail to

The illustrated almanac published by the Philadelphia Record has no fitter illus tration than the picture of the magnificent Record building which adorns one of its covers. Besides a host of old proverbs to live by during the new year, the official directory, election returns, and Philadelphia statistics, its contents include the original feature of a most valuable summary of sporting events and records.

The Baltimore Sun sends out an almanac of varied contents, with much interest ing information about the Monumental city and much more of general value. In the office, household and counting room it is a vade mecum.

BROWN'S INON SITTERS.

Shall We Let the Child Die?

MEDICAL

A hard-hearted political economist, tooking at a pale and puny child feebly gasping as t lies upon a pillow, says that the child might as well die. It is so weak and poor that its life will never be worth much anyhow. There are already a good many people in the world who are not of much account anyhow. And what's the use of adding to their number another weakling, who has but siender chance of ever amounting to anything †

Now ask that child's mother what she thinks about letting the child die. About this time the hard political economist had better get out of the way. " Let my child die ! No No! As long as there is a remedy to be found that will save that child, the child shall not die I'll spend my last dollar to save the schild." Well, try a bottle of BROWN'S IRON BITTERS on that child. See the poor little fellow pick up strength. He revives. He will live. Hosts of other children have been brought almost from death to healthy life by Brown's Iron Bit. ters. Your druggist sells it.

RHEUMATIC SYRUP.

A Limb

And a Family Made Happy.

Mr. Philip Moore, of West Webster, Monroe County. N. Y., says: "My daughter, now eighteen years old, has, for the past eighteen months, ben afflicted with rheumatism in a very severe form. One year ago it settled in the knee, since which lime she has been unable to touch her foot to the floor or move her limb without suffering the most excurciating pain. Her limb was fast growing out of shape, although we were doing for herall we could, having used all the remedies we could hear of and that were recommended were doing for herall we could, having used all the remedies we could hear of and that were recommended for rheumatism, none of which benfitted her in the least. Herease was pronounced incurable by the physician and by our neighbors, and all believed that she would be a cripple all her days, and that her limb would never 'De restored to its original shape. But I am happy to say that to-day my daughter is entirely free from all rheumat's pains, and that she can walk with perfect case, having thrown satche her crutches, and her limb seems as strong and per fect as ever; all from the use of your wonderful medicine. "Rheumatic Syrup," which we consider one of the best medicines ever introduced for purifying the blood, and I only regret that all others who are afflicted with rheumatism can not know of its superior merits.
You are at liberty to use my name
if it will do you any good, and I shail be only too gladtotell any and everyone what it has done for my daughter." daughter."
