A VESSEL WRECKED.

DASHED TO PIECES IN THE SURF.
The barkentine Elmina Goes Down off the Jersey Coast With All on Board--A Bad Scene.

The barkentine Elmina, from Salcombe, England, struck on Long Beach, nearly opposite Life Saving Station No. 21, and a mile east of Beach Haven, on Tuesday evening about seven o'clock p.m. She was soon discovered by the life saving patrolmen, and they notified the crew of the life saving station. After several fruitless attempts lines were shot over the Elmina's bow.

The wind was blowing a gale and the rain fell in torrents, making the work of the men both on shipboard and on shore especially difficult and impeding the movement of the line. The hope, however, was finally pulled up by the barkentine's crew, and the usual questions shouted from craft to land if all was right and taut and if it was safe to haul the life car.

While the work of adjusting the car was in progress, delayed by the ice covered rope, the Elmina swung around, side to the sea, slipping the rope and throwing it out of position. Those on the shore could hear the breaking of the line. Steadily the life saving men worked to adjust the car, when suddenly a great wave struck the barkentine and swept over her, carrying everything with it. When the spray cleared, a brilliant scene was witnessed, and it was seen that those on board had been washed into the ocean. It required but a few minutes then for the sea to break the vessel in pieces, which were strewn along the beach and carried over it by the rising tide.

Nothing could be done further by the men on the beach. They watched the timbers as they were dashed on the sands and swept away again. Every fragment was examined in the hope that some of the crew could be found clinging to the wreckage, but without avail.

HOME COMFORT.
Home Comfort.
 After a Many Mile Country Physician Tells What He Thinks of My People.

"I wish to graciously some people would learn when they need a doctor and when they don't," exclaimed Doctor E., as he entered his house in a cozy little village in the interior of the state of New York, after a twelve night ride of many miles. "I have been down among the mountains to see a man who the messenger said was very sick and had not likely to live until morning, unless he had immediate help; and found him suffering from a rather sharp attack of colic, which his family might have relieved in ten minutes, if they had a grain of sense and two or three simple remedies in the house. But no; they must remain ignorant as pigs, and when the least ache or pain takes them, send for a doctor, whether they ever pay him or not."
