A stated meeting of the Lancaster county agricultural and horticultural society was held in their room in the city half yesterday atternoon. The following named yesterday atternoon. The following named members were present: Casper Hiller, Conestoga; C. L. Hunsecker, Manheim twp; S.P. Eby, esq., city; F. R. Diffen deiffer. city; Johnson Miller, Warwick; Henry M. Engle, Marietta; C. A. Gast, city; Joseph F. Witmer, Paradise; John C. Linville, Gap; Israel L. Landis, Lancaster; J. M. Johnston, city; Levi S. Reist, Manheim twp., Calvin Cooper, Bird-in-Hand, John H. Landis, Millersville.

Casper Hiller said some fears were entertained that the heavy and compact fall of snow might have injured the wheat He was satisfied the fear was unfounded He believed the peach crop had not been injured by the severe weather. The mer cury was at no time below zero, at his Mr. Engle said he did not think there was a good peach bud on his place. They had all been frozen. The mercury was at one time 6 degrees below zero. He did not think the wheat had been injured by the snow. Mr. Linville said the snow had done no damage to the wheat, but the trees had been greatly damaged by being girdled by the rabbits and the mice. The clover had also been badly damaged by the m ce He had not examined his peach trees, and did not know whether they had been injured Mr. Landis thought the heavy snow had been favorable to the wheat crop, protecting it from the severe weather. Miller said the mercury at Lititz had been as low as 15 below zero. The peaches were probably killed. The tobacco was turning out better than was expected, and the cattle as a general rule had wintered well, and were in good con

Mr. Engle had noticed many fruit trees girdled by rabbits and mice. The mice were more numerous than he had ever seen them before. Last season was very favorable to their propagation, the clover and other articles on which they feed being superabundant.

An Essay by Simon C. Eby, Feq. Mr. S. P. Eby, esq , read the following

Question—Should the invention and use against being imposed upon by such as are worthless. It will add to the interest of of labor saving farm implements, and machinery be encouraged? If time is money, and a penny saved is a penny carned, then the question must be an wered in the affirmative : Provided, the cost of the machine does not exceed its benefits; and provided also, that good use is made of the time saved. Without entering into a discussion of the question now agitated bet ween learned doctors and evolutionists, whether man was created a civilized being, and retrograded nto barbarism, or was originally a savage and has gradually evolved into a civilized condition, one thing seems certain : That the improvement and multiplication of labor saving machinery is one of the best evidences of the progress of a people in tion. The to go together. In proof of this we need only contrast the condition of savage naions and their rude implements and want of machinery with our own condition in life and the machinery of the present

The inventive brain of scientific civilized man has more than quadrupled the power of his hands, and placed him as it were, at the long end of the Archimedean lever that moves the world. Distant places have been brought near, and time almost annihilated. By the use of machinery the farmer gains in several ways. He can work more quickly and often save crops that other. wise would be lest in unfavorable weather. He can do his work better and in less time, thereby saving many precious days and hours which may be employed by himself and family in still forther qualifying themselves to manage their affairs totelli gently and profitably, and in educating themselves morally and mentally up to a higher standard of true manhood and

The time thus saved becomes as so much capital, to be used or thrown oway. As a general rule our farmers have largely profited thereby. That in some few matauces good use has not been made of it, is the fault of the individual and not of the machine. And if any mischief is done, it must be attributed more to outside evil influence than to any thing arising among the farmers themselves; who as a class, have always been a quiet and sensible

When leading men in the society of our cities, who should set a better example, condescend to dance at balls, disguised as horses, as they did not long ago in New York; and when in Pennsylvania, it is get ting to be a common thing, since the old law against it has been repealed, for highly respectable people to attend night mas querades, with their faces concealed under masks, as was the custom in the most corrupt and dissolute periods of France and Italy-when these performances are published approvingly by the newspapers, and are no longer denounced, from the pulpits; it is easy to see whither we are drifting, and no wonder that some of the virus should have reached even our quiet farm homes and turned some heads there. It does not necessarily follow, that because the whole of summer is no longer oil. needed to sow and harvest, and the entire winter taken up in threshing out the crops that the farmer should turn loafer the rest of the year, nor that his sons should become idle drones hating work; or his daughters giddy butterflies of fashion; and together like moths and caterpillars of extravagance consume what honest that of Chester Whites. industry may gather, or saif denying fru-Mr. Hiller preferred the
