FRIDAY EVENING, FEB, 8, 1894,

Respectfully Dedicated to the Memory of the Dead : Taken from us : lost for evermore, The graceful life that made our lives mo bright :

What is there left us now but to deplore Our tear dimmed eyes can scarce see Heaven

We wanted him, we miss him, hour by hour-The tender voice, the ready helping hand : How can we how submissive to the Power Whose mercy now we cannot understand

Yet, it is so. Look on him as he lies in slumber, like a child, so cold, so deep. The world unmirrored in his tired eyes, God saw he needed it ; He sent him sleep.

He felt too deeply, and to feel is pain ; No joy nor woe can make his gentle breast Throb with tumultuous feeling o'er again,

Even the unbeliever owns this-rest. A rest for which we vainly seek in life, A peace which comes not with the quiet night; Our dreams are shadowed sell with care and strife, And work begins anew with morning light Brain, heart and hand were never idle here ;

Then dare we weep because his works are done? The more we valued him and held him dear,

We should rejoice that his reward is won.

Peace for our dear ones whatsoe'er the price Though dark and lonely now must be our days Of our own hearts, we make the sacrifice. And oh! there should be comfort in the

That pain or grief can touch him ne'er again Unseifish love throughout his life he taught, Let not such lessons have been taught in vain.

REOWN'S IRON BITTERS.

The Hard-Working Man.

He was a hard working man and for a good many years he had been working twice as hard as any man ought to work. He said he had a splendid con: itution and that he could stand it He forgot that as years passed on the waste of the system is much greater than in youti ntie the repair of it is less. He became weak, debilitated, nervous and despondent. He regarded the future with read, and said he had worked himself into an untimely grave. But he was not taken to the cemetery at all. Instead of teat, a good friend brought him ome Brown's Iron EITTERS.

He began to pick up strength. That was what he wanted. Brown's Iron Bitters enriched his failing blood and put new life into nim. It toned up his digestive organs so that his ood began to nourish him and do him good. Most hearthy does he recommend Brown's Iron Bitters.
