TAKING OF PETRA.

Thrown by a Recept Lecture on Philadelphia Ledger.

When a lecture, by a competent person, goes away from the beaten track to take us into new fields of human interest, that is a decided gain to the public. When, in addition to this, the lecturer has himself visited the strange places he describes and taken accurate views of the objects he has been upon the spot shows—when he has been upon the spot and speaks from his personal knowledge— his discourse has large additional value. And especially is this the case when the main subject is entirely new to the great mass of the people. Of this description was Mr. Edward L. Wilson's illustrated lecture, "The Taking of Petra," delivered and exhibited at the Academy of Music on Monday night. It was a revelation to most of the large audience present on that occasion. Of course there were those present who had heard offer read of the large audience present on that occasion. Of course there were those present who had heard offer read of the give perfect satisfaction in every case or money refunded. He sure you get Hanky's Carbotte Salva, as all others are that occasion. Of course there were the present who had heard offer read of the give perfect satisfaction in every case or money refunded. He sure you get Hanky's Carbotte Salva, as all others are that occasion. Of course there were that occasion. Of course there were the present who had heard offer read of Petra : but there must have been very few who were prepared for such a realizing sense of that strange place. It is a ruined city along streets that are sunk deeply in gorges, or rather crevices, in the rugged mountains of the Bible "land of Edom," and a city where the temples, palaces and burial places, and nearly all the structures of which it is composed, are chiselled or hewn out of the solid rock. It does not appear that there were any buildings there to be used as dwellings, the Arab inhabito be used as dwellings, the Arab innastrumns of the country protably dwelling in tents of the country protably dwelling in diseases of various kinds, to do away with one great characteristic of the place is which, if it could be done without inlury, would be the happiest event of their lives. tles, forts, palaces, or whatever they may have been, were, with but very few exceptions, hewn out of the rock by chisel or axe. What people executed these marvellous and colossal works—colossal in the enormous labor they demanded—is not known. The time in the world's history when the work was done there is no recorded history. Petra is mentioned in the Book of Kings under the name of Selah, which is said to mean a rock, as Petra itself does in Greek. It is mentioned by Strabo and Pliny, Josephus, and taken arready and articles containing these death dealing drugs, are taken in hopes of getting rid of drugs, are taken in hopes of getting rid of the percentage of the perce Eusebeus and Jerome ; but none of these tell us about the people or the age to which the rock temples and monuments are to be referred. It was the capital of Tetters, Humors, Inflammatica, Rough Scaly Arabia Petries, that is mountainous Eruptions of any kind, Discases of the Hair Arabia, on that side of the desert, and is and Scalp, Scrofnia, Ulcors, Pimples or Tenthe "Selah" which Amaziah, king of der itchings on any part of the body should Judah, took in the war, when he "slew know that there is hope for them in a sure, of Edom in the Valley of Salt ten thousand." Strabo says it was the metropolis of the Nabatheans, "shut in by rocks round about, but within having copious fountains for the supply of water and the irrigation of gardens." It appears to have gone out of sight of history from about the sixth century of our cratter.

to revive the memory of the place. This package. was about 1822, in his "Travels in Syria," when he sought to identify the wonderful ruins in Wady Moosa with the ancient Petra. Some few travellers have succeeded in getting there, but very few indeed. Our fellow townsman, Edward L. Wilson, who was the photographist of the Centennial exhibition, is one of them. By dint of photographic outfit, and a small train of auxiliaries. The ruins are far out of the way of ordinary caravan travel (about ten days' travel, we believe, through the most barren and difficult country), and the Arabs resolutely resist every attempt to explore them by reason of the tradition that they conceal great treasures. Mr. Wilson did get there, however, and we have the grand result in his illumninated pictures and in the narrative with which he accompanies them. He takes his audience with him through the journey, into the parrow mountain defiles, through the sunken streets, and shows them the surprising remains of a city almost upknown to civilized man. The forms, dimensions, proportions, ornamentation and grace of structures delight the observer and the hearer at every stage of progress. There is a strange mingling of styles of of architecture. Of course every one is ready to find architecture of the Egyptian type as seen in pyramidal forms and in obelisks; but who could expect to find Corinthian facades of the most graceful forms in such a place? Yet these abound and are the most prominent objects in the photographic views, except those devoted to burial purposes. In the absence of recorded history with regard to these structures, the observer begins to doubt whether we get our Grecian colonnades. pediments and entablatures from the people who inhabited this Arab wilderness of barrren rocks, or whether that noble style of architecture was carried there by means that no one can now understand. and it is to be remembered always that these structures, the comparatively well preserved remains of which we are shown, were made (not built) as no other Grecian temples were ever construct d-their fronts, columns and all being he wn (ro.u the natural rock standing in place, and their interiors excavated by the same quite modern years.

We cannot go further into details, except to add that the rock is sandstone of many colors-red, purple, yellow, bluish green, and others in a variety of shades. This gives unusual attractiveness to the pictures In all cases where the natural colors are introduced. As already said, the lecture is a revelation of a world comparatively unknown to archaeology, architecture, eth nology, geography and general science. It furnishes materials not only for the study of the savant, but of most interesting instruction to the popular mind. Petra and the country round about it are impossible places, in their present condition, to support life in a numerous population; and yet large numbers of people must have been there for several generations, or these wonderful works could not have construct ed. Who were they, and when was this surprising city cut in the solid rock

REGENTS IRON SITTERS.

Like an Evil Spirit.

In olden times it was thought that evil spirits came in through cracks and keyholes. The generally approved way to keep them out was to plug up the keyholes and stop the cracks with cotton. Notwithstanding these preventive measures, the evil things had their own was and often came in as they pleased.

So comes malaria now-a days. We try to keep it out or the keyhole and it comes in by the crack. We stop up the crack, and to ! it comes from a leak in the plumbing, or an openlug from some neglected drain, or from some unsuspected source and unguarded direction. We cannot always keep malaria out, but we cau give it battle and drive its effects from our systems. If Brown's Iron Bitters is taken in time, malaria has not a ghost of a chance Th's is the great family medicine. Your druggist sells it, and you ought to keep a bottle in
