CARLISLE'S SPEECH.

FOR REPORMATION, NOT REVOLUTION What the Speaker Said at the Free Trade Dinner and How it Was Received. At the dinner of the Free Trade club in New York on Saturday night, Speaker Carlisle's toast was "The Federal Union." He said :

"Mr. President and Gentlemen of the Club: I should be cold indeed if I were not profoundly grateful for this very friendly reception. It is so much more than I expected, or had any right to expect, that I feel myself wholly unable to express my appreciation of it. express my appreciation of it.
"I am obliged to you also for the op portunity to say a few words in response to the toast just announced, although it would be impossible, under the circumstances, to do anything like justice to the subject, and, perhaps, I shall not confine myself very closely to it. Certainly I shall not attempt to do more than call your attention very briefly to one or two of the most conspicuous advantages con ferred upon the American people by the union established in 1789. The formation of that union, peaceably and fraternally, under a constitution which made such radical changes in the relations previously existing between the several states them selves, and between them and the general government, was undoubtedly one of the greatest political achievements of modern It is difficult to say which is most entitled to our admiration, the statesmanship of the men wao framed the constitu tion or the patriotism and intelligence of the people of the several states who ratified it and made it for themselves and their posterity, the supreme law of the land. [Applause.] It is, I think, safe to assert that in no other part of the world ould such a fundamental change have been peaceably made at that time, and perhaps, gentlemen, it is equally safe to say that it could not have been made here twenty or thirty years later.

"Why and how this union was formed are historical questions which it would be superfluous, and, in fact, impossible, to iscuss upon this occasion. What benefits and advantages it has already conferred upon us and how its bond shall be strengthened and perpetuated are questions which challenge our attention con stantly. The old confederation possessed no means of sustaining itself. In fact, it was but a skeleton of a government. It had no power to impose taxes, to regulate commerce, or to administer justice. It had but one of the essential departments of a real government, the legislative, and even that was defective and almost impo-tent. Each state had the right to levy imposts and duties, subject only to the condition that it should not interfere with treaties entered into by the United States in Congress assembled with foreign kings, princes, or states. There was no limita tion whatever upon the power of any state to impose duties upon the products of another American state brought within its limits for sale or consumption, for the purpose of protecting and encouraging its own domestic manufactures. The state of New York had full power to impose any rate of duty its authorities might think

"YOU CLAIM TOO MUCH for SAVARITAN NERVINE," says a skeptle, "How can one medicine be a specific for EPILEPSY, DYSPEP. SIA. ALCOHOLISM, OPIUM EATING, RHEUMATISM, SPERMATORRHÆ, or SEMINAL WEAKNESS and fifty other complaints?" We claim it a specific, simply because the virus of all diseases arises from the blood. Its Nervine, Resolvent, Alterative, and Laxative properties meet all the conditions herein referred to, It's known world wideas existing under the confederation was a wise one, and ought never to have been disturbed by the formation of the federal union. But, gentlemen, the framers of the constitution, the men who founded this federal union, did not think the confedera tion was the best system. They believed that absolute free trade between the several states was imperatively demanded by the interests of the people. Accord-ingly they adopted this provision as a part of the constitution without a single dissenting voice:

... No state shall without the consent of Congress, lay any imposts or duties on mports or exports, except what may be absolutely necessary for executing its in spection laws, and the next proceeds of all duties and imports levied by any state on imports or exports, shall be for the use of the treasury of the United States and all such laws shall be subject to revision and control of Congress.' It is true Mr. George Clymer, of Pennsylvanis, said while this subject was under consideration that 'if the states have such different interests that each cannot be left to regulate its own manufactures without encountering the interests of other states, it is proof that they are not fit to compose one nation.' But he stood substantially alone in his position, and when the vote was taken not a single state was recorded against it. [Applause.]

"Thus free trade was established by the constitution, not only between the states then existing, but between all the states that might thereafter exist as members of the Federal Union. [Applause] I venture to believe, my friends, that the most ardent advocate of the protective system will admit that the wonderful growth and prosperity of this country are attributable largely to this provision of the constitution, more largely than to any other one thing. [Applause.] With free commercial intercourse between the states, our internal commerce has con stantly and rapidly grown until it amounts to thousands of millions of dollars. More than a hundred and twenty thousand miles of railroads have been constructed, over which almost innumerable trains are constantly passing, carrying manufactures and other articles of commerce from state to state, while the great waterways are crowded with steamers and barges and other craft laden with the products of every part of the Union. The markets of

New York are as free as the markets of Philadelphia for the iron and steel and coal of Pennsylvania, as free as the mar-kets of Savannah, of Mobile, or Charleston are to the cotton and fruits of the South. "What a different picture this country presents from what it would have pre-sented if the policy of restriction and pro-tection had prevailed among the states as it has prevailed for so many years between the United States and foreign countries.
[Applause] Under the liberal policy established by our constitution, our means of in'ernal communication and transpor tation have increased and are still increasing, while under the restrictive and obstructive policy of Congress our merchant marine, once a source of pride and profit, has almost disappeared from the seas; and unless something can be done to ar-rest its further decline it will disappear entirely. Free commercial intercourse between the states has encouraged trade, and the development of the national resourcer, fostered agriculture and manufacand limited production substantially to the demands of home consumption, and in many cases actually arrested the free development of great industrial interests. Under this system, when any highly pro-tected manufacturing industry has reached a stage of development which enables it to supply immediate demands, its growth must cease because it cannot have its pro-ducts gaining access to another market.

"The consitution not only prohibited the

"The consitution not only prohibited the states from imposts or duties upon imports or exports, but it expressly delegated to Congress the power to lay and collect taxes, duties, imposts, and excises to pay the debts and to provide for the common de fence and the general welfare. This is simply the power to raise a revenue for public purposes. It is wholly separate and distinct from the power to regulate com-merce between the United States and foreign nations, and among the several states and with the Indi n tribes, which is conferred by another clause of the con-stitution. The two powers were delegated for different purposes. It is a monstrous abuse of the powers of taxation to use it not for the purpose of raising a revenue but for the purpose of regulating and prohibiting commerce. [Great applause. "Let no one, I pray you, misunderstand me upon this point. The experience of mankind has shown that it is impossible to devise any system or scheme of duties upon imports that will not incidentally, in more or less degree, either injure or benefit private industrial interest. I have never hesitated to say that I would rather benefit them than injure them, but what I mean to assert is that when the primary or principal object of a tax imposed by public authority is to benefit a private interest it is not the legitimate use of the power of taxsition, but a simple spoliation. [Great my water was very bad, at times I actuall applause.] Whether it is called protection passed blood. This was followed by generating the state of tion, direct or incidental, and is or is not really beneficial to productive industry, is a question about which, I imagine, there will never be anything like perfect unanimity of opinion, but, whatever may be our opinions upon that question, most of us will agree in thinking that there may be conditions in which it would not be wise to make a sudden change, even from a bad policy to a good one. [Ap plause/1 "When manufacturing interests have grown up under a high protective system, or through a series of years, and those who are engaged in them have become accustomed to lean upon the bounty of the overnment for support, it might be inprious and even disastrous to them sud denly to repeal or greatly reduce the duties. [Applause.] Such a course duties. would seriously alarm many who have ample capital employed in these enter prises, and when capital is really alarmed even though it be without cause, the result is for a time as bad as if there really were cause for alarm. For these reasons, for all interests, it has always been my opinion that it was the duty of Congress to proceed carefully and conservatively in its legislation upon this subject, paying due regard at every step to the large interests involved. In other words, I am in favor of reformation-not revolution. [Ap plause.] Mr. President, this process of reformation must go on until the power of taxation is used only for proper purposes.

[Applause.] There must be no step backward. [Applause.] There must be no deviation from correct principle and sound policy. ted, this Federal Union is commercial as well as political. Politically we are free commercially we are not. [Applause. When our ancestors determined to rebel against the British system of government n America one of the principal sauses alleged in the Declaration of Independence was that England had out off our trade with all parts of the world. Is it not strange, my friends, that the government established for this people by these same men will persist in the maintenance of a policy which must ultimately produce substantially the same result? Let us see to it that the whole foundation of such an accusation against the government of the Union is removed as speedily as cir cumstances will admit. [Applause.] Tax ation must be only for the purpose of fostering and protecting legitimate trade, strengthening the Union, insuring the prosperity of the people, and perpetuating the system of government under which we live. For myself, Mr. Chairman, I will cooperate with all men and all organiza tions, by whatever name they may be known, in every proper manner, to bring about this great result." [Applause.] Joseph Wharton's Volcanic Dust In order to dissipate theories that the vitreous particles found in the snowfall of January 29 might have proceeded from iron or steel works or from chimneys, Joseph Wharton has made an examination of samples of dust from the steel works and iron blast furnace of Bathlehem. Mr. Wharton attributed the recent sunset glows to volcanic dust, particles which he claims to have found in the snow near his subur-ban residence. In reference to his last research he states that in the snowfall of January 20, the dust particles possessed the characteristics of volcanic glass as did also some pum'ce which had settled on a vessel in the Indian Ocean, near Kraikotoa. The furnace dusts had strongly marked dissimilarities from the other particles. These comparisons, Mr. Wharton contends, greatly enhance the probability that the snow dust was of volcanic origin.

A Baptist Minister's Experience.

"I am a Baptist Minister, and before I ever thought of being a clergyman, I graduated in medicine, but left a lucrative practice for my present profession, 49 years ago. I was for many years a sufferer from quinsy; "Thomas' Kelectric Oil cured me." I was also troubled with hoarseness, and Thomas' Kelectric Oil always relieved me. My wife and child had diphtheria, and Thomas' Kelectric Oil cured them," and if taken in time it will cure seven out of ten. I am confident it is a cure for the most obstinate cold or cough, and if any one will take a smail teaspoon and half fill it with the Oil, and then place the end of the spoon into the head by sniffing as hard as they can, until the Oil fails over into the throat, and practice that twice a week, I don't care how offensive their head may be, it will clean it out and care their catarrh. For deafness and carache it has done wonders to my certain knowledge. It is the only medicine dubbed patent medicine that I have ever felt like recommending, and I am very anxious to see it in every place, for I tell you that I would not be without it in my house for any consideration. I am now suffering with a pain like rheumatism in my right limb, and nothing relieves me like Thomas' Kelectric Oil."

For a long time I was under the treatment of the best physiclans, and tried many of the so-called reme dies, but received no permanent benefit When I was in the drug business in Boston heard favorable accounts of the efficacy of Hunt's Remedy for diseases of the kicneys and urinary organs, and having decided to give it a trial, I purchased some at Wingste' drug store, Dover, N. H., and have receive great relief from using it. The severe pains in my bick are removed, and I am able to sleep soundly and obtain rest at night-which for so long a time I could not do and the veakness in the urinary organs has been relieved, and I greatly regret that I did not test the great merits of Hunt's Remedy when was first taken sick as I am confident it would have saved me from several years of suffering; and I am more strongly convinced of this after hearing of the most remarkable cures effected by Hunt's Remary in a case of Bright's Disease here in our midst in Dover, att r the patient had been p onounced incur able by celebrated physicians."
