A GHOST STORY

WMAT AN ENGLISH DOUTON SAW

The Phantom That Came to Dr. Jessey and Waten He DLI Not Wast to Go Away. Dr. Augustus Jessop, a celebrated English physician, has written out the following parrative of an experience which actually occurred to him :

On the 10th of October, 1879, I drove over from Norwich to Mannington hall to spend the night at Lord Offord's.

Though I was in perfect health and high spirits, it is fair to state that, for some weeks previously, I had had a great deal to think about, some little anxiety, and some considerable mental strain of one kind or another. I was not, however, conscions of anything approaching weariness, irritability, or "fag." I arrived at 4 p. m., and was engaged in pleasant and animated conversation till it was time to dress for dinner. We dined at seven; our party numbered six persons. these four at least bad been great travelers. I myself was rather a listener; the talk was general and discursive, and amused and interested me greatly. Not for a single moment did it turn upon the supernatural; it was chiefly concerned with questions of art and the experiences of men who had seen a great deal of the world, and could describe intelligently some distance to drive we broke up at half past ten. The main object of my going over to Manufington was to examine and take notes upon some very rare books in Lord Orford's library, which I had been anxiously wishing to get a sight of for some years, but had never been fortunate enough to meet with up to this time. I asked leave to sit up for some hours and make transcripts. His lordship at first wished me to let his valet remain in at tendance to see all lights put out, but as this would have embarrassed me and compelled me to go to bed cariier than I wished, and as it seemed likely that I should be occupied till two or three in the morning, it was agreed that I should be left to my own devices and the servant should be allowed to retire. By eleven o'clock I was the only person down stairs, and I was very soon busily at work and absorbed in my occupation.

The room in which I was writing is a large one, with a huge fireplace and a grand old chimney; and it is needless to say that it is furnished with every comfort and luxury. The library opens into this room, and I had to pass out from where I was sitting into this library and get upon a chair to reach the volumes I wanted to examine. There were six small volumes in all. I took them down and placed them at my right hand in a little pile, and set to work-sometimes reading, sometimes writing. As I finished with a book I placed it in front of me. There were four silver candlesticks upon the table, the candles all burning, and as I am a chilly person, I sat myself at one corner of the table with the fire at my left, and at intervals, as I had fluished with a book, I rose, knocked the fire together, and stood to warm my feet. way at my task till nearly one o'clock. had got on better than I expected, and I had only one more book to occupy me. I rose, wound up my watch, and opened. a bottle of selizer water, and remember thinking to myself that should get to bed by two after all. I so to work at the last little book. I had been engaged up in it about half an hour, and was just beginning to think that my work was drawing to a close, when, as I was actually writing I saw a large hand within a foot of my elbow. Turning my head, there sat a figure of a somewhat large man, with his back to the fire, bending slightly over the table, and apparently examining the pile of books that I had been at work upon. The man's face was turned away from me, but I saw his closely out reddish brown hair, his car and shaved cheek, the eyebrow, the corner of the right eye, the side of the forehead, and the large high cheek bone. He was dressed in what I can only describe as a kind of co-clesiastical babit of thick corded silk or some such material, close up to the throat broad, of satin or velvet serving as a stand up collar, and fitting close to the chin. The right hand, which had first attracted my attention, was clasping, without any great pressure, the left hand; both hands were in perfect repose and the large blue veins of the right hand were conspicuous. remember thinking that the hand was like the hand of Velasquez's magnificent "Dead Knight" in the national gallery. I looked at my visitor for some seconds, and was perfectly sure that he was not a reality. A thousand thoughts came But to no purpose, crowding upon me, but not the least feel "Morphine and o ing of alarm, or eyen unensiness; curiosity and a strong interest were uppermost. For an instant I felt eager to make a sketch of my friend, and I looked at a tray on my right for a pencil; then I thought, "Upstairs I have a sk-tch book—shall I fetch it?" There he sat, and I was fascinated, afraid, not of his staying, Holland's Gold Pens, but less he should go. Stopping in my writing, I lifted my left hand from the paper, stretched it out to the pile of books, and moved the top one. I cannot explain why I did this-my arm passed in front of the figure, and it vanished. I was simply disappointed and nothing more. I went on with my writing as if nothing had hap pened, perhaps for another five minutes, and I had actually got to the last few words of what I had determined to extract when the figure appeared again, exactly to the same place and attitude as before. saw the hands close to my own ; I turned my head again, to examine him more of less than four weeks I threw away my closely, and I was framing a sentence to crutches and went to work lightly and kept address to him when I discovered that I on using the bitters for five weeks, until I bedid not dare to speak. I was afraid of the sound of my own voice. There he sat, and there sat I. I turned my head again to my work, and finished writing the two or three words I still had to write. The paper and my notes are at this moment before me, and exhibit not the slightest tremor or nervousness. I could point out the words I was writing when the phan-tom came and when he disappeared. Having finished my task, I shut the book and threw it on the table; it made a slight noise as it fell—the figure vanished. Throwing myself back in my chair, I sat for some seconds looking at the fire with a curious mixture of feeling, and I remember wondering whether my friend would come again, and if he did whether he would hide the fire from me. Then first there stole upon me a dread and a sus picion that I was beginning to lose my perve. I remember yawning ; then I rose, lit my bed room candle, took my books into the inner library, mounted the chair as before, and replaced tive of the volumes; the sixth I brought back and faid upon the table where I had been writing when the phantom did me the honor to appear to me. By this time I had lost all sense

This is a simple and unvarnished parrative of facts. Explanation, theory, or inference I leave to others.

THE AGRICULTURAL COLLEGE, Wast a Majority of the Trustees Favor.

For some time past the trustees of the Pennsylvania state college have had under consideration a plan of running that institution that would more fully satisfy the demands of the agriculturists of Penusylvania, For years the management has been running behindhand financially. A committee of three was appointed about of relief, and report a remedy if possible. The committee consists of Governor Pattison, Superintendent of Public Instruction Dr. E. E. Higbee, and the president of the college, Dr. Atharton, A majority of the committee prepared a report, and the other evening it was submitted to the board of trustees, in special session at Bellefonte. The president of the college two mouths ago to inquire into the subject board of trustees, in special session at Bellefonte. The president of the college also submitted a report, taking issue with the majority of the committee, and there is a wide breach in consequence in the board of trustees. After a warm discussion the report of the majority was adopted. It "The college has an annual income of body of students $30,000, three farms, a body of students numbering from 130 to 150, a large building requiring a considerable amount to put it in repair and proper working order, a faculty consisting of sixteen teachers, what they had seen and comment upon it and a current debt reported as amounting suggestively. I have very rarely been at to some $56,000. The farms are widely a more pleasant party. After dinner we played a rubber. We "left off as we began," and as two of the guests had part of the state. The western farm is in part of the state. The western farm is in no sense a model farm, and is in no condition to throw upon the market. In its present state it is an injury rather than a benefit to the college. It is an advertisement against scientific farming, and not an illustration of its benefits. The eastern farm is in better condition, but is far from being what a model farm should be. The central farm, in immediate connection with the college, is all that the friends of agricultural science ought to require. To basten the liquidation of the debt, to put the buildings in proper work ing order, to supervise the farms, so far removed from the college itself that, as model farms, they may properly exhibit to the people the rich results of modern science applied to agriculture, and to bring the whole work of the college into closer sympathy with the farming and industrial community of the state, we submit the following plan, which, in our judgment, will best subserve the ends above men tioned without detracting from the present professional thoroughness of the institu

"Faculty-President(duties as at present) $3,000; lecturer on agriculture and superintendent of the farms, $2,500; professor of agricultural chemistry and superinten dent of experimental station, $1,500 professor of chemistry, $1,500; professor of botany and horticulture, $1,200; professor of mathematics and civil engineering, $1,200; professor of modern languages (French, German and English), $1,200; professor of geology a zoology and head of preparatory department, $1,200; professor of veterinary science and physiology and assistant in preparatory, $1,200; professor of military science and tactics, -assistant, $500 ; assistant, $500. Total cost of teaching force, $15,500.

"This plan removes from the work of I the college the Latin and Greek langua ges, except so far as the former may be introduced in the study of the French. It adds, as we think, to the efficiency of agricultural studies by supplying a lecturer on scientific farming who shall at the same time act as responsible superinten-dent of the farms, and also makes room the important matter of veterinary science. These additions we have thought well calculated to answer the wishes of all intelligent farmers and secure their hearty cooperation. Moreover, it leaves a bal-ance of $14,000. This balance, we report, should be devoted to the following uses $6,000 to be applied to the farm distant from the institution, and the remainder to such incidental expenses as may be seen to be necessary to maintain the efficient working of the college." A colored man, in Henry County, Ga. got fity seven possible out of one hollow tree, he sold them all, and the first thing he purchased was a bottle of Dr. Bull's Cough Syrup.
