"COATS-OF-ARMS."

THE PRETENSIONS OF SHODDY

What the Corobets and Heraldic Devices Signify-Create, Monograms and Things of That Sort.

N. Y. Letter to Philadelphia B scord. I never was more struck with the longing of simple republicans for aristocratic belongings than the other day in looking over a lot of letters, answers to invitations received by a friend of mine who had given a large and fashionable entertain Nine out of every ten of these letters had a coat of arms emboased on the paper and envelopes, and not only a coatf-arms but coats-of-arms that are used by persons of very high nobility, generally of royal descent. I suppose out of 150 coats of arms, at least fifty were coroneted. I cannot imagine anything more absurd than a republican citizen with a coroact emblazoned on his letter paper. But our republican citizens seem to have no sense of the ridiculous in this matter, and if you will notice the carriages rolling up

Fifth avenue to the park you will see these escutcheons, with all their elaborate quarterings, and the coronet surmounting the shield. It is a well known fact that not half of the people who use these coats of-arms have come by them through in-heritance. Of course, there are a great many American citizens whose families bonestly own their own coats of arms, but there are a great many more who go to a book and copy the device that accompanies a name similar to their own. I have know this to be done in any number of cases, and I have also known more simple. minded persons to select the crest they thought the prettiest, regardless of the family name that accompanied it. On one of these very notes of which I speak there was crest-a coronet-with an arrow writer was quite as necessary in pressing it in place, but now a days, when all enve lopes are gummed, sealing wax is a superfluity. I do not say that it is not much the prettier, or that I do not like it more than the gum, but I do say that gum and sealing wax are more than there is any call for. However, the simple republicans of whom I have been speaking do not seem to see that there is anything incongruous in this, and it is no uncommon thing to see envelopes glued and sealed with wax at the same time. I saw the other day on some very elegant paper a remarkably well made shield, and I said to the recipient of the letter: "This is the cleanest cut that I ever saw; it looks as though it had been made in the shop. There is no ragged wax around the edges and it certainly must have been made by an expert." "Don't you know what that is?" replied my friend; "it is a made seal, and if you will examine the envelope you will find that it is made on the flap, and is only one of the innumerable imitations of the day. There is no wax about it at all; it is simply stamped paper." And upon examination I saw that it was. Speaking of coats of arms, a friend of mine some time ago busied herself in field by addressing Mr. Burr, who owns making a collection of crests, monograms this wonderful animal, which has already and things of that sort, which she pasted

New Method of Warming Street Cars. ientific American.

A new method of warming street cars has been on trial for several week on the De Kalb avenue line in Brooklyn. About seventy cars have been fitted up with the appliance, which is a very simple one, and does not encroach on the seating room for passengers. Two pipes run under the seats on each side, charged with a compo sition af acetate of soda, which at each trip is heated by a jet of steam sent through from a stationary boiler at the stable. The compound being heated is dissolved into a liquid, and upon cooling throws out into the car the heat stored in it. This heat is pleasant and moist, and without being intense enough to be disagreeable, is sufficiently strong for passengers to enjoy with ordinary ont of door wraps, the tempera-ture by actual record, being maintained at 40° higher than that outside the car. Thus, if the thermometer is down to 20above zero the average temperature of the car is kept at 60° above.

town for twenty-four hours. A romantie story was previously circulated as to the loss of her hand, to the effect that she passionately loved a young officer, who, taking her beautiful hand in his, caressed and admired it, saying he wished he had such a hand. "It is yours," she is alleged to have said, "as, indeed, is everthing I have," and the next morning the hand was sent to him. A Brussels paper, however, says that in the interest of truth it feels bound to say that La Manchotte lost her hand by poisoning her fingers with verdigris while cleaning a cop-

I applied to our local physician, and not receiving any help I called on Mr. John A. Morgan, our druggist, and stated my case. He immediately handed me a bottle of Hunt's Remedy, offering it as the great specific for that complaint. I com-menced using it at once, and from the very start I began to improve, and by the time I had used the bottle was entirely well.
