WINTER STILL LIVES.

March, the first month of Spring, has been here and is now entered upon the minutes of time as a bygone. April has been ushered in, and with it cold and uncomfortable weather, as a reminder, it would seem, that winter still lives, and that Spring, with all its glad tidings, is yet laggard and yet a thing of the future, all premonitions of the weather-wise to the contrary notwithstanding.

Spring will surely come, however, and with it bring the mild weather which will necessitate a change of raiment—the laying aside of the Overcoat and Heavy Garments for those lighter and more comfortable. Anticipating the wants of our patrons, we have just made up one of the largest and finest selections of CLOTHING FOR MEN, BOYS AND CHILDREN, shown by any house in this section of the state. All the handsome styles prevalent, made in a thorough, systematic manner, from best known makes of Textile Fabrics, and warranted equal to the best sold by any one anywhere at like figures. FINE WOOLENS, for Custom Tailoring; handsome and attractive Novelties, to meet the requirements of a Fashionable Trade. No assortment like ours. No prices more reasonable.

AYER'S PILLS.

A CLEAR HEAD.

"One year ago I was induced to try AYER'S PILLS as a remedy for Indigestion, Constipation and Headache, from which I had long been a great sufferer. Commencing with a dose of five pills, I found their action easy, and obtained prompt relief. In continuing their use, a single Pill taken after dinner, daily, has been all the medicine I have required. AYER'S PILLS have kept my system regular and my head clear, and benefited me more than all the medicines ever before tried. Every person similarly afflicted should know their value. 162 State street, Chicago, June 6, 1882. M. V. WATSON."

A NEW BOOK FOR LADIES.

Female Hygiene and Female Diseases,

BY J. K. SHIRK, M. D.,

Member of the Lancaster City and County Medical Society.

This work describes in plain language the special Physiology and Hygiene of Woman and the Causes Nature, Symptoms, Prevention and Treatment of Her Diseases.

"Well adapted to fulfill its object."—PROF. WM. A. HAMMOND, New York City.

"It is a debated question how much information should be given to the public about diseases of females. We are and always have been in favor of teaching them freely, provided it is done in the proper spirit and manner. We can say of this little work that it fully meets these requirements. It is alike free from superficiality and sensationalism, and one should have no hesitation in recommending it to any woman who desired to acquaint herself with the hygiene of her sexual life. The author is a respected regular physician and his volume is meritorious."—Medical and Surgical Reporter, Philadelphia.

"Having carefully read the little volume, we find no word or phrase to offend the most exacting.....We believe that every woman would profit by the information contained in this handy volume, and that very many would save themselves hours of suffering by following its precepts."—Germantown Telegraph.

"He [the author] evidently has made a thorough study of his subject and he deals with it plainly. The instructions he gives are based on sound physiological principles, and the book will be found valuable by those for whom it was specially prepared."—The Boston Transcript.

"The work is one which women may study with profit."—The Portland Transcript.

THE SHIPWRECK.

THE LOSS OF THE DANIEL STEINMANN.

The Captain's Story—How the Ship Struck—Pulling the Helm Hard Aport—Too Late—Survivor's Stories.

Captain Schoonhoven, of the wrecked vessel, Daniel Steinmann, on being interviewed, presented the following statement respecting the catastrophe which he had prepared on the 31 of April, after a voyage of thirteen and one half days from Antwerp:

At 6 p. m., the bearing of Chebucto by dead reckoning to the soundings, was West one half South by compass, distant twenty-five miles. There was a dense fog and heavy rain. The steamer did slow steaming, West one quarter, South one point, soundining every hour. About 9:15 I saw through the mist a faint light about two points off the starboard bow, disappearing out of sight at times for four or five minutes. Taking it for Chebucto, I steered for it, sounding thirty fathoms, and ten or twenty minutes later saw that it was the fixed light of Sambro, appearing clear, and, at the same time, seeing a faint show of what I took to be Chebucto light, about four points on the starboard bow.

We sounded twenty-six fathoms. Put the helm hard aport, but it was too late. Just before the ship struck on the rocks we had heard twice the fog whistle of Sambro. The first shock was light, the second heavy. We could not get the engines to work, and we drifted over the rocks and anchored the ship lying to pretty quiet, with little sea.

I ordered the chief and second officers to lower the boats and get the children and female passengers in first. While I saw this going on, having already one boat on the water, the crew working with a will, I saw the ship coming nearer the breakers. Again I ran forward to see if the chain cable was not broken. Before getting there a monstrous sea broke over the poop washing every passenger, children and women, who stood on deck overboard. This was followed immediately by an awful crash. The ship went down as quick as lightning, stern first, carrying every one who was on deck and in the bridges. I ran up the fore rigging and was washed out before getting half way, but succeeded afterwards in catching the topsail yard which stood just above water. A moment after a passenger was able to join me.

The night was foggy and rainy. We saw nothing more. The next morning we were gallantly rescued by the men upon Sambro island about 5 a. m., in one of our own boats, there being no life boat or rocket apparatus on the island. Some of the crew had already succeeded in reaching the island through the surf. The number of passengers drowned was ninety, and the number of the crew drowned was thirty-three. The number of passengers saved is three; the number of crew, six.

We had a fine passage, until on the Banks, which we crossed in 44 deg. 23 min., seeing some patches of field ice. Thence we had an almost continual fog with rain. We got our last observation on the morning of the 24. We had a full general cargo of about 1,400 tons. The steamer was drawing twenty feet six inches aft and nineteen feet forward. She was evidently broken with rocks through her bottom. It was a storm from the eastward when we struck, with thick fog and rain. It was impossible to save any papers whatever. I stayed in the foretop sail but had to go further up to clear the break of the sea, and stood in the rathines for eight hours with the passenger.

We were afraid to lash ourselves for fear the mast would break away. We just held on, ready to jump, from 1 p. m. to 5 a. m., when a heaving line was thrown to us and we jumped into the water and were pulled through the surf into the boat.

BLOWING THE WHISTLE.

A Statement by one of the Lighthouse Men—The Fruitless Warning.

Alexander Gilkie's narrative was as follows:

My brother Alfred is keeper of the light house. The regular inhabitants of the island are the keeper, his wife and three children, myself and another brother, Stewart, a bombardier and four gunners of the royal navy, and Alexander Houseman, the engineer in charge of the fog whistle. At the time of the disaster the keeper and the bombardier were in Halifax on duty in making their regular returns, etc. There were at the time two boilermakers on the island engaged in repairing the boiler of the fog whistle. I was in charge of the fog whistle from 6 till 9:30 o'clock, having relieved the engineer at 6 o'clock. The whistle was going then.

It was thick all day, and I kept the whistle going until 8:45, when it cleared off so I could see Devil's island and Chebucto Head, and I stopped the whistle. Just before the engineer was relieved, at 9:30, the lookout man sighted the ship about a mile south of the light. He called me and I saw her. She was lying to, heading about east northeast. She lay there for about ten minutes while I looked at her, when she started ahead and ran about a mile. She then stopped. She started ahead again, went only about 500 yards, and again stopped. I think she struck then on a broad breaker shoal, for she began to back astern.

It was dark, and I judged from her motions by her lights. The fog whistle was started again at 9:45, though it was still clear. This was done to warn the ship from the rocks. About twenty minutes after she began to back she struck again, this time on Mad Rock, on the northeast shoal. She then let go the anchor. This did not seem to hold her, and she drifted up across the shoal and sank between 300 and 400 yards from the shore of the island. My brother Stewart and I then got in a boat and attempted to put out to the steamer, but the boat was too small to face the breakers, and we had to put back. We then went up and burned lights on the rocks and lit fires along the shore of the island to warn any boats that might approach of the danger of coming too close. We also burned blue lights on the shore, waving them towards the cove to indicate to such boats how to safely approach the landing. This was done under the superintendency of the artillery men stationed here. After about an hour a boat came to sight, which proved to be one of the boats of the ship, containing seven men. We guided them into a fit place at which to land, the wharf at the cove. We kept the lights burning along the shore all night, but saw nothing more until daybreak, when we observed two persons clinging in the forward rigging.

My brother Stewart, Artillerymen Collins, Heyworth, and Redding and myself then manned the boat, which had come from the steamer, putting out to the wreck; rescued and safely landed the captain and one passenger, who were the persons we had seen in the rigging. Throughout the day the weather continued too thick for us to signal, the sea too boisterous to permit our landing on the mainland. We did what we could to make those who had been saved as comfortable as circumstances would permit.

A SEAMAN'S EXPERIENCE.

Life Boats Engulfed With the Steamer—Heartrending scenes.

Florentine Deserne, of Antwerp, one of the surviving seamen and one of the most instrumental in launching the life boat that carried the seven men safely to the island, makes the following statement of his experience:

I was on the lookout forward at the time of the disaster, having gone on at 9 o'clock. I sounded just before 10 o'clock, when the steamer was going dead slow, and found twenty six fathoms of water. I then went forward on the lookout, and just as I reached my post she struck the rock, but not violently. I turned around to look aft and had no sooner done so than she struck again. All hands were called on deck at once, and the order to get the boats ready was given. The steamer was still backing, and one boat was being got ready. The anchor was dropped, and just as this was done a very violent shock was felt amidships.

Captain Schoonhaven called out, "All hands to the boats," and immediately there was a great rush for them, almost if not all the passengers being on deck by this time and rushing frantically about in a terrible state of excitement. After delivering his command the captain proceeded forward to see if the anchor was secure. As he did so two immense seas, following one on top of the other, swept over the ship. All hands standing on deck were thrown from their feet and washed into the ocean, and those who had managed to clamber into the boats went down with the steamer, the fastenings not having been cut in time. When the order was first given by the commander, I made for one life boat hanging in the davits, and, calling to another seaman to get in, told him to cut the ropes when I gave the word. As the vessel plunged beneath the water I cried out to cut, and, each severing a rope, we freed ourselves from the davits and floated on the surface, clear of the wreck.

All around us people who had been swept off were plunging in the water and crying for help, and it was only with the greatest difficulty that we prevented the boat from being seized on all sides and swamped. The appeals of the drowning women and children were heartrending, but our own lives were at stake and we could render but few others assistance. The boatswain's mate was first hauled on board, and shortly after we took in two of the firemen and two passengers. One of the latter, an Italian, was surrounded by a crowd of perishing unfortunates as the boat passed, and as he made an effort to clutch the side and haul himself in half a score of others clung to his limbs and body, and it was thought our little craft would be upset. The Italian, however, perceived the danger, released his hold of the boat's side, took a dive down into the water, and, rising a moment later with all the others shaken off, he clambered on the boat. Seven of us now in the boat were kicked about in a rough sea for about an hour and a half.

Finally we got close to Sambro island, and observing the guiding lights of those on shore, we followed their directions and effected a safe though difficult landing.

Florentine Deserne ascribes the disaster to the very thick and tempestuous weather experienced, and is also of the opinion that there was deviation of the compass. Deserne has been a victim of shipwreck on half a dozen previous occasions, but states that his latest escaped was the narrowest by far in all his experience.

GRITTENDEN'S PATTI KISS.

A Local Hit That Brought Down the House at St. Louis the Other Night.

St. Louis Post-Dispatch.

Governor Crittenden and his wife were at the Grand opera house last evening during the performance of "Pop" by Rice's Surprise Party. Those who have already seen "Pop" will remember that one of the brightest things is a song by Kate Castleton, "For Goodness Sake, Don't Say I Told You," readily adapted to local exigencies and supplied with a catching refrain. Governor Crittenden and wife were enjoying the performance heartily and when the fair singer began her "For Godness Sake, Don't—" song they, as all who hear her invariably do, succumbed at once to the spirit of genuine fun, with which she invests it. Looking naively towards the audience at large the charming actress began:

"I heard something awful a short time ago."

And in the brief pause which followed the governor nodded appreciatively at Mrs. Crittenden, while the audience, who fully understood the rich joke which awaited them, thundered their applause and gave vent to peal after peal of laughter. Finally the hubbed ceased and Kate went on with her caution:

"For goodness sake don't say I told you."

Then came more applause and laughter and then followed from the singer:

Don't whisper a word, or there'll be trouble I know,
For goodness sake don't say I told you."

After another irrepressible interruption the singer began again:

"I've learned from a very reliable source—"

But she was not permitted just then to go further. The audience could not restrain their laughter in which both the governor and Mrs. Crittenden joined, although it was evident that they were wondering what made the audience's attention shift and keep on rapidly shifting from the singer on the stage to their august selves. The explanation was soon made. The laughter had not died away when the musical voice, clear as a bell, with enunciation perfect in every syllable, sang forth:

"That the Governor kissed Mrs. Patti by force."

Then came the beginning of one of the wildest scenes ever seen in a theatrical auditorium. The audience rose to a man and shouted forth its glee in wild and uncontrollable screams of laughter, while every eye in the house was leveled at the governor, whose face assumed a hue which suggested appoplectic possibilities. He joined in the applause and smiled in a manner which showed he heartily appreciated the great publicity of the occasion. Mrs. Crittenden was not so well pleased and the stern rigidity of her eyes looking straight in front of her showed that the humor of the joke was entirely lost upon her.

A Missouri paper says that a girl in that state dislocated her shoulder by kicking at a cat. She must have struck all of its nine lives at once? Many people think they have numerous lives, and let coughs and colds take their course rather than take Dr. Bull's Cough Syrup.

An Editor's Tribute.

Theron P. Keater, editor of Ft. Wayne, Ind., Gazette, writes: "For the past five years have always used Dr. King's New Discovery, for coughs of most severe character, as well as for those of a milder type. It never fails to effect a speedy cure. My friends to whom I have recommended it speak of it in same high terms. Having been cured by it of every cough I have had for five years, I consider it the only reliable and sure cure for Coughs, Colds, etc." Call at C. A. SHERIFF'S REPORT.

Under date of May 19, 1883, Mr. Isaiah Cook, formerly sheriff of Skowhegan, Me., writes as follows: "I have been afflicted for over twenty (20) years with a weakness of the kidneys and liver, and have had severe pains in the back and sides, which were brought upon me in the first place by exposure during my stay in California during the early settlement of the land of gold. At times my water troubled me very much and after trying many different means without receiving any benefit, I was induced to try Hunt's Remedy, although I was much prejudiced against it and all other medicines. I purchased a bottle at Cushing's drug store, here in Skowhegan, and I found that the first bottle relieved all pains in the back and sides; and I have, in my family, used five bottles in all, and have found it a medicine of real merit and of great value and have gladly recommended it to many of my friends and neighbors, who universally praise it in high terms. You are at liberty to use my name for the benefit of suffering humanity."

TIMELY ADVICE.

I have been troubled with kidney disease and gravel for a long time, with severe pains in my limbs and back, with inflammation of bladder. My sufferings were terrible. I tried several physicians, all to no purpose—I found that I was growing very feeble. I was discouraged, and lost faith in physicians and medicine, when a friend from Malden, who had been cured by Hunt's Remedy of gravel and liver complaint, recommended it to me, and from the first bottle I commenced to improve, and three bottles have entirely cured me, and I heartily thank my friend for his timely advice to use Hunt's Remedy, for all the pains have gone from my back, and I am in excellent condition, and I feel that a word from me, may be the means of saving some friend that may be suffering as I did, before taking Hunt's Remedy, the best kidney and liver cure. SAMUEL LITTLEFIELD,

May 12, 1883. No. 1452 Washington Street, Boston Mass.

HORSE RAILROAD MEN,

Having occasion to use a medicine for general debility in my family, I was recommended by a friend to use Hunt's Remedy, as that was being used with great success all over the country. We have used one bottle with marked benefit, and find it just as represented, and a medicine of great value, and I cheerfully add my testimony in praise of Hunt's Remedy. GEORGE W. SCOTON,

WHOLESALE AND RETAIL

Tobacco and Cigars

—AT—

STEHMAN'S NEW STORE,

116 NORTH QUEEN STREET (Second door below Franklin House).

Police, Little Neck, Saw Log, Chocolate Cream are the best chewing brands in the market, manufactured of selected stock. Honey Plant and Best Out are large plugs for the price.

Best smoking we ever offered: Derby and Fruits and Flowers. Miners' Pride for smoking and chewing. Chewers pronounce our Golden Thread Fine Cut the best that can be made.

All Cigars retailed from 2 for 5c to 10c apiece are manufactured by ourselves. That they are long filler, good workmanship and excellent quality, all admit.

Box trade a specialty; always one to two million on hand to select from, ranging in price from $6.00 per hundred down. Cheap cigars bought in large quantities, and can always furnish you goods at bargains. Our $1.00 and $1.50 per hundred cigars are certainly a prize to purchasers.

As heretofore, will always have a full line of Plug and Smoking Tobacco and Cigars at the OLD STAND.
