of $16,000 that were stolen in 1882 at the quent occasions was charged with obtaining large amounts of money by sharp practices that won for her the name of "the sbrewdest woman in America."

Columbain, ignorant of her identity, had opened negotiations to sell her the stolen bonds, and she betrayed him into the hands of the police. The McSorley man sion was plundered by three men during the absence of the inmates. The robbers hands over a sefected away sixteen broke open a safe and carried away sixteen $1,000 Richmond county bonds bearing 7 per cent, interest, together with some jewelry. Two of the robbers, a thief named Jacques and "Tom" Gardaer were arrested for another crime and sent to Moyamensing prison in Philadelphia Some of the stolen jewelry was got on Jacques.

Two weeks ago Mrs. Peck advertised for a loan of money on some jewelry. Columbain replied to the advertisement and made an appointment. She met him, and he said he could not lend her money on the jeweiry, but he would give her bonds that were just as good. A day or two after she met him, and he gave her some of the bonds to ascertain their value. She took them to a down town broker and he advised her against their purchase, say-ing they might be stolen. He furnished the numbers of the stolen McSorley bonds, and on comparing these with the bonds she had found that some of the numbers were identical. She then communicated with the police and detec tives shadowed her and Columbain at every meeting afterward. Mrs. Peck endeavored, by direction of the police, to have Columbain bring all the bonds her for purchase, and he promised to do so Friday. By appointment she met him down town, and then they went to an nptown saloon, the detectives following Columbain seemed to have some suspicion of Mrs. Peck and showed her a pistol and knife, threatening to kill her if she should betray him; but, rothing daunted, she told him that she was armed as well as he was, and showed him a large revolver. The detectives were outside waiting a signal from Mrs. Peck, when they were "spotted" by a thief, who raised an alarm, and Columbain ran out the back way and escaped. The detectives gave chase, when he threw away some of the bonds, $6,000 worth, which were recovered. An alarm was sent out to all the precincts, and about 100 men were set to scour the city after being furnished with Colum-bain's description. Saturday morning he was found in a down town hotel and arrested. He was taken to court and remanded until to-day, when he will be sent to Staten Island to answer the charge of bond stealing and burglary. Columbain was one of the witnesses who gave damaging evidence against state prison officials in the late prison investigation.

Blame's lejustice to Buchanan The Protectionist. The events of Buchanan's administration, naturally painful as they are to the patriotic American mind, should not lead candid and careful historians to overlook his great services to the country during his long and useful career before his elevation to the presidency. When the unfortunate Bancroft treaty inflicted injury upon our shipping interests, it was the patriotic firmness of James Buchanan, secretary of state under President Polk, that prevented the irreparable damage to our maritime interests by upholding sternly and firmly the sanctity of our coasting trade against foreign invasion. Mr. Blaine, no doubt unwittingly, has overlooked this fact in his book, and there

A NEW YORK BOND THIEF CAPTURED. A Clever Trick by Which a Notorious Hond Stolen Bonds.

By the active efforts of a most unex pected ally, the New York police have recovered bonds worth $6,000 out of a pile residence of Owen and Hugh McSorley, near West Brighton, Staten Island, and arrested their holder, Julius Columbian, a notorious thief and ex-convict. The Hungarians are averse to working below ground, and generally prefer surface work at half what might be earned in the mines. The practical miner theis no attagonist in the Hungarian. A few years ago laborers was very scarce in the coal regions, and the early detach ments of Hungarians were welcomed by the miners. The latter always employ from one to two men each, who load into cars the coal the miner blows down. Sometimes a lucky blast will lessen coal enough to allow the miner several lifle days. Instances are known where a single blast has kept the laborers at work loading cars for fifteen days, the miner in the mean time doing nothing but getting so much for every car load noisted from the mine. The trouble that is assuming threatening aspects at present comes from the fact that the great companies have been flooding the coal fields with Hungarians, while at the same time they have been keeping the men at work only on half time.
