We thank the for Thy wise design, Whereby these human hands of ours In Nature's garden work with Thine. And thanks that from our daily need

The joy of simple faith is born; That he who smites the summer weed May trust thee for the autumn corn. Give tools their gold and knaves their powe Let fortune's bubbles rise and fall :

Or plants a tree, is more than all, For he who pleases most is bleet; And God and man shall own its worth Who tolls to leave as his bequest An added beauty to the carth.

Who sows a field, or trains a flower,

And soon or late, to all that sow, The time of barvest shall be given : The flower shall bloom, the fruit shall prow, If not on earth, at last in heaven.

How One Small Boy Passed Away.

Detroit Free Press A pale, pinched face—a piping voice—a little body which seemed to be all bones and angles. Many a smile his odd dress provoked. His coat had once belonged to a full grown man, while his pantaloons could not have been patched any more without sewing patch upon patch.

Who was he? Ah! did you ever ask the question? Certainly not. You have no curiosity to know one treet gamin from another.

How did be live? You never inquried. Odds was the difference to you whether he had a full meal or went supperless to bed. Had it been the case of a well dressed man a stranger to you, you would have asked how many thousands be was worth, and where he was to buy or build.

Well, that boy is dead. He broke down on the street the other day, burning up with the fever, and they took him to the hospital to die. There they saw how poor in flesh he was—they found the bruises inflicted upon him by rough boys—they washed his bleeding feet and wondered how he could have walked a single square. It was too late. They shed tears as they wiped his own away and they answered s ravings with kind words, but friends had come too late. And what?

In his ravings he accused you and me of selfishness, of hard heartedness—of mock philanthropy—aye, of worse. We would have taken the part of the weaker dog. but we let that orphan lad take the blows of the world. We saw that our horses were well fed, but we let that boy go hungry. We made a great show in the papers of contributing to orphan asylums, and yet we had nothing for this tender In his delirium he cried out that we had given him no chance. We threw nickels and dimes to base impostors, but we had not even one poor penny for a boy whose poverty compelled him to sleep in 30 DAYS TRIAL.

"Guilty !" So plead all ! Ere this he has told his story in heaven, and on the pages of the angels' book has been written against each and every one of us: "Accessory to the death of Charlie Hall, who was brought to the grave by the brutal neglect of citizens boasting of their philauthropy and open hearted charity."

Letter from Senator ct. C. Nelson.

SENATE CHAMBER, ALBANY, N. Y., April 4, 1883. On the 27th of February, 1883, 1 was taken with a violent pain in the region of the kidneys. I suffered such agony that I could hardly stand up. As soon as possible I applied two Allcock's Posous Plasters, one over each kidney, and laid down. In an hour, to my surprise and delight, the pain med vanished and I was well. I were the plasters for a day or two as a precaution, and then removed them. I have been using Alteock's Porocs PLASTERS in my family for the last ten years. and have always found them the quickest and best external remedy for colds, strains, kinks and rheumatic affections. From my experience I believe they are the best plaster HENRY C. NELSON.
