What Struck an Old Soldier.

" It will soon be twenty years since the war Under the hot sun of August, 1882, the y'llage of Dover, N. J., lay still as the sphinx in Egypt, while Elijah Sharp, of that place, slowly and softly spoke of the past, "Yes," he said, "I was in the army and saw many of the sights of those fearful years. I was finally discharged from disability, resulting from sunstroke. I came home, miserable in health and spirits: so enfeebled that I took cold on the slightest exposure. Life seemed worthless to me; I lived only in memory."

"That was sad enough," I said, dividing my last two cigars.

"That's so," responded Mr. Sharp; "but I got over it, Outgrew it? Not exactly. When in that condition I began taking Panksu's Toxic and my health commenced to improve right away. I was astonished at it and so was my wife. I piled on the flesh and could eat anything. My ambition blazed up. I could attend to business and now—excepting that I have to take care about exposing myself to Under the hot sun of August, 1882, the vil-

THE LOUAL CREMATION SUCIETY Its Increasing Membership-Stock Increased to $5,000-The Work to Go On- Frattl-

Processes of Cremation Another meeting of the increased number of subscribers to the cremation and funeral reform association was held at the INTELLIGENCER office last evening. Some twenty members were present and nearly a half score of additional subscribers to the stock were reported since last meeting. A number of letters were read from per-sons outside the city expressing sympathy with the movement and a willingness to take stock in the Lancaster society.

The committee on location plan, etc. reported progress and was instructed to select a vacant lot of ground, near the city limits, not less than half an acre in extent preferring an elevated position and a site fit for ornamentation and adapted to all he necessities of the cremation project. The committee on charter, plans, etc., re-ported at length, and articles of associaion were adopted in part, the remaining features to be considered and finally de-cided at a meeting to be held next Friday evening, when directors and other officers will be elected, and immediately thereafter steps will be taken to obtain a charter.

The Cremation Movement. The inquiries of the various committees have elicited much practical information regarding the processes of cremation and illustrating the spread of the movement for its promotion. New Orleans has a well organized society. The United States cremation company and the New York cremation society held a joint meeting the other evening. J. D. Beugless presided He said it cost $18,000 per annum alone to keep the grass cut on the graves in Green weed countery. Courtland Palmer, Henry Tuck, M. D., and others spoke in behalf of cremation. The report of the society shows that nearly $25,000 has been sub scribed, the amount the charter calls for before they can begin the erection of a fore the end of this year.

The bill introduced in the English par nament recently providing for the regulatian of cremation, though not passed, received a very respectable vote. London Times comments very favorably upon it and observes that we have drifted far from the vilage church yard where a grave was holy ground and now the associations of crowded city cemeteries have become rather repulsive, than other marked interest at this time: which is as soon as the vital spark ceases to exist, they would not want to be buried; the human frame while undergoing de composition people would turn with horror from the custom of burying their dead. It sometimes takes a human body fifty, sixty, eighty years—yes, longer than that—to decay. Think of it! the remains of a decay. Think of it! the remand of friend lying under six feet of ground, or friend lying under six feet of ground through less, for that length of time, going through slow stages of decay, and other bodies all this time being buried around these remains. Think of thousands of such bodies being crowded into a few acres of ground, and then reflect that these graves or many of them, in time fill with water, and that water percolates through the ground and mixes with the springs and Why, if people knew what physiciaus know, what they have learned in the dis secting room, they would look upon burning the human body as a beautiful art in comparison with burying it. There is something eminently repulsive to me about the idea of lying a few feet under ground for a century, or perhaps two centuries, going through the process of decomposition. "When I die I want my advocate of cremation, in his review articles on the subject says: "A powerful reverberating furnace will reduce a body of average size and weight leaving only a few white and fragile portions of earthy material, in less than an hour. I have myself personally superin-tended the cremation of two bodies, one small and emaciated, of forty seven pounds weight, and one of one bundred and forty four pounds, not emaciated, and possess the products-in the former case weighing one and three quarter pounds, in the latter about four pounds. The former was completed in twenty five minutes, the latter in fifty. No trace of odor was perceived (indeed; such a thing is impossible), and not the slightest difficulty presented itself. The remains described were not withdrawn till the process was complete; and nothing can be more pure, tested by sight and smell, than they are, and nothing less suggestive of decay or decomposition, It is a refined sublimate, and not a portion of refuse, which I have before me. The experiment took place in the presence of several persons. Among the witnesses of the second experiment was Dr. George Buchanao, a well known medical officer of the local government board, who can testify to the completeness of the process.

during the first three or four minutes of but will pass through a flue into a second A complete combustion is thus at-tained. Not even a tall chimney is necessary, which might be pointed at

Dr. Wm. Siemens, a still more rapid and complete combustion is possible. A body weighing 226 pounds was placed in a cylindrical vessel about 'seven feet long by five or six feet in diameter, the interior of which had been heated to 2,000° Fahrenheit. The inner surface of this cylinder is smooth, almost polished, and o solid matter but that of the body is introduced into it. The product, there-fore, can be nothing more than the ashes of the body. No foreign dust can be introduced, no coal or other solid combustible being near it-nothing but heated hydro carbon in a gaseous form and der before using it—a pure, almost white interior, the lining having acquired a tem-perature of white heat. In this case the gases given off from the body so abundantly at first, passed through a highly heated chamber among thousands of interstices made by intersecting fire bricks, laid throughout the entire chamber, lattice fashion, in order to minutely subdivide and delay the current, and expose it to an immense area of heated surface. By this means the gases were rapidly oxidized and not a particle of smoke issued by the chimney. No second furnace, therefore, is necessary, by this method, to consume any noxious matters, since none escape. The process was completed in fifty minutes, and the ashes which weighed about five pounds, were removed with ease." The apparatus by which cremation is effected is chiefly of two kinds, of which there are various minor modifications: First, that in which the body is re duced by direct contact with the flames, and of this kind are the Gorini and Venini furnaces, which are those most approved in Italy; and secondly, that in which the body is reduced to ashes by means of hot air, and in no time coming in contact with the flames. Of this latter kind are the furnaces in use throughout Germany from which that to be
