IMPROVING LAWS.
Says Howes and What They Do.
Lancaster Telegraph.

Since the introduction of the lawn mower, the appearance of our lawns about residences in the vicinity of large cities has become a subject of general remark among European travelers, who frequently speak of them in their correspondence in very warm terms of praise; while Americans who formerly visited England were equally warm in their praise when referring to the deep green, soft, velvety appearance of the English lawns, and wondering why it was that we could not have the same. While, owing to the moist atmosphere, we may never reach the moist atmosphere, we may never quite equal the lawns of England, yet we can approach them so nearly that the difference is scarcely noticeable, except by thorough gardeners. The introduction of these light and rather cheap lawn mowers has, however, become so general that every body with a plot of grass becomes acquainted with the opportunity of keeping it in the best possible manner; and a little mower is at once purchased and this beautiful addition to the homestead is secured. A handsome lawn, however small, is the beauty-spot of any homestead, and it should never be allowed to be defiled by shrubbery, trees, bushes or vines of any kind. A single bed of the choicest flowers, such as hyacinths, tulips, pansies, or when the beds are large, of begonias, coleus, etc., attracts the attention and calls forth the admiration of the passer-by. To keep a lawn in the best condition, it should be clipped in moist weather every ten or twelve days; but in dry spells every fifteen or eighteen days, no matter whether it appears to need clipping or not, as it will have a tendency to maintain a compact, even sod.

Fertilizing of Lawns.
We have more than once heretofore referred to the subject of manuring or fertilizing lawns, and endeavored to impress upon our readers the importance of stable manure, cast in lumps thickly over the lawn, especially in the autumn, and allowed to remain through the winter; also that as a rule lawns required very little manure at all, and was instead a perfect plot which, until two springs ago, had nothing applied to it as a manure or fertilizer for eight years! We don't say that this is to be recommended generally, but it is very decidedly of the opinion that a slight dressing of bone-meal or super phosphate to about three-fourths of an acre, restored it completely, and it is to-day in excellent condition. The cost was about one cent a pound, and we are quite sure that the same effect could not have been produced by ten dollars' worth of stable manure. Besides, there were no lumps, and no alteration in the places and rank grass, as is usually the result of stable manuring. We noticed last fall the ruining of a number of lawns by enormous dressings of baryard manure which, lying all winter, came out last spring in the most possible condition. How this can be overlooked by the owner, if even the gardener is too stupid to know better, we cannot imagine. Added to this is also the fact that we have, over and over again, warned them against the practice.
