HARTMAN'S YELLOW FRONT CIGAR;

MATRIMONIAL

WHAT MAKES THE WORLD GO ROUND P. Huntington's Bride-The Romance At. tached to the Railway Magnate's Second Matrimontal Venture . Y. World Mr. Collis P. Huntington, the railway magnate and thirty times a millionaire, has been absent from his usual haunts for nearly two weeks. He has hidden himself from his friends to enjoy without fear or disturbance his second honeymoon. And his romantic marriage—a veritable love match—is being freely discussed by his old acquaintances, who unite in congratulating the old California pioneer on his new matrimonial venture. Of the many strange woddings at which the Rev. Henry Ward Beecher has offici-ated this of Mr. Huntington to Mrs. A. D. Worsham was one of the oddest. The surroundings were the most luxurious to be found in New York, the groom's name is known from Maine to California, the pretty bride has a more than independent fortune, and yet society does not know them. The ceremony was performed in the parlor of the widow's beautiful home, No. 4 West Fifty fourth street. The house, just off Fifth avenue, has quite a little yard in front, and the clambering vines, almost hiding the many windows and giving to the place an air of rural coolness, make one forget that the residence is in the most fashionable centre of the crowded city. Rumor has it that Mr.

of friendly regard to Mrs. Worsham. The story of the intimate friendship existing between the Worsham and the Huntington families is interesting. Though the railway president was inti-mate with General Grant, knew Mr. Vanderbilt well and had the entree to nearly all the best houses in the city, he visited only at the widow's cosy home in Fifty fourth street. And Mrs. Worsham, with a fortune of $2,000,000 and every oppor tunity to gratify any social ambition, spent much of her time at the Huntingon mansion. The widow and Mrs. Huntington were said to be devoted to looked upon as among the brightest events in her unhappy life.

Mr. Huntington's figure is well known to frequenters of Wall street. Tall and erect he bears his sixty-three years as though they had left him in the prime of tife. His gray bair makes him look somewhat older. He is a native of Connecticut and settled in Oneonta, New York, where he carried on a mercantile woman, who died in this city eight months ago. When the gold lever brown '49 Mr Huntington went to California, When the gold fever broke out in where he became a prominent merchant. He finally settled in Sacramento City, made frequent trips to California. I was during one of these visits that he met Mrs. Worsham, who was then a dashing engaged to Whitelaw Reid, who called regularly at the Huntington home, No. 65 Park avenue. The house is a large double building on the corner of Thirtyeighth street, and is litted up throughout with all the luxuries that the taste of a confirmed invalid could suggest. Mrs. Huntington appeared to sympa thize with her husband's regard for Mrs. Worsham, and it is said was quite willing that he should give the lady valuable presents. About eight months ago Mrs. Huntington died and Mr. Huntington quietly married his old friend. She is about thirty-five years old, a pronounced blonde, has a pretty complexion and wears glasses. Her son, who kept her company in the great house, will, it is said, be sent off to school when the couple re-turn from their honeymoon. It is said they are now traveling in Europe. GENERAL HANDOCK'S ROMANUS. Interesting Story of His Meeting with the Vashington Letter.

I was talking politics with a senator from the West this week, and, on mention ing General Hancock's name, he told me a story of the gallant general that is romantio enough to repeat. Soon after his In many places there has been no rain graduation from West Point, when but a little past his majority, he started from the West in company with a number of army men, to see the country. They stopped at St. Louis, and while there General Hancock met his future wite. His heart was touched at onceand for the first time-and, swithout a thought of the impropriety of his action, he involuntarily reined his charger and took off his hat. The fair vision at the window waved a shapely white hand, blushed and drew the curtain. This only increased the young man's disease, and when he returned to his hotel his absent-mindedness and evident ab straction provoked comment on the part of his friends. Try as he would the beautiful face at the window haunted him still, and hely yielded to an irresistible imstill, and hel yielded to an irresistible impulse to return to the house where his fate resided, in hope of getting another wave of the hand or a smile of encourage ment to love's young dream. As luck would have it, fortune smiled on the young man, and the lady was just leaving the house, accompanied by a tail and elderly gentleman, as he reached there. She recognized him at ones, and rosy blushes suffused her face as she entered a carriage in waiting and was driven rapidly away. Young Hancock was now more eager than ever, and hailing a passing cab, directed the driver to follow the carriage containing the beautiful unknown. Finally her carriage stopped, and she entered the house of an old army friend of the ardent lover who followed close after and was admitted by the friend in person. To him the smitten youth unbosomed himself, and an introduction followed to Miss Mary Russell, a daughter of one of St. Louis' wealthiest merchants. The young lady seemed to have been struck by the same dart that pierced her lover's heart, and a cordial invitation to call was extended to him. I need a no more. The rest of the story is simply the oft told tale, for in six months Miss Mary Russell became Mrs. Winfield Scott Han-I COPY FROM NONE, BUT TAKE THE Cock, and she is held in the warmest lead and sell the best 5c. GIBLS WHO WERE WED FOR PUN Two Sisters Under Age Married by a Justice -Trying to Get the Marriage Annuled.

Misses Lydia and Mary F. Wyles, sisters, from Brimfield, Mass, recently arrived at New Rochelle, on a visit to Mrs. William H. Ducker, a married sister, and shortly after their arrival they sent an invitation to F. G. McNally and Henry W. Walling, two cadets with whom they had become acquainted in Massachusetts to visit them at New Rochelle for a few days. The invitation was accepted and the cadets came and prolonged their visit for several weeks. During this time the party of four passed most of their time in pleasant drives and walks, which finally resulted in a call upon William Pinckney, justice of the peace, who married Miss Lydia to McNally and Miss Mary to Wal ling; which they now say was done as a joke. The bridegrooms having departed and the young women having learned that the joke proves to be a reality, the brides have made an application to County Judge Mills, at White Plains, to have Mr Ducker, their brother in-law, appointed their guardian ad litem, in order that they may begin proceedings for the annulment of their marriages.

Fulton tried to get the navy department to adopt his invention for the use of steam as a propelling power, but found it very difficult to do so because of the opposition that always exists to innovations, but he finally succeeded in persuading the secretary of the navy to submit his model to the test of a board composed of the officers each other. A Steamer Caught in a Terrible Storm. A fearful storm of wind and rain raged Thursday afternoon on Chesapeake bay. The steamer Georgiana was caught in the storm off Sandy Point, had the windows of her upper saloon blown out, and lost her way in the blinding rain, drifting at the mercy of the waves. Her passengers were panie stricken, women fainted and men putting on life preservers. Finally she was taken in tow by the revenue cutter Phlox, and with great difficulty taken to Baltimore, where both vessels remained last
