CUTICURA REMEDIES.

A POSITIVE CURE FOR EVERY FORM OF SKIN AND BLOOD DISEASE FROM PIMPLES TO SCROFULA.

THOUSANDS OF LETTERS IN OUR possession repeat this story: I have been a terrible sufferer for years with Blood and Skin Humors; have been obliged to shun public places by reason of my disfiguring humors; have had the best physicians; have spent hundreds of dollars and got no real relief until I used the CUTICURA RESOLVENT, the new Blood Purifier, internally, and CUTICURA and CUTICURA SOAP, the great Skin Cures and Beautifiers, externally, which have cured me and left my skin and blood as pure as a child's.

ALMOST INCREDIBLE.

JAMES E. RICHARDSON, Custom House, New Orleans, on oath, says: In 1870 Scrofulous Ulcers broke out on my body until I was a mass of corruption. Everything known to the medical faculty was tried in vain. I became a mere wreck. At times I could not lift my hands to my head, could not turn in bed; was in constant pain and looked upon life as a curse. No relief or cure in ten years. In 1880 I heard of the CUTICURA REMEDIES, used them and was perfectly cured.

Sworn to before U. S. Com. J. D. CRAWFORD.

STILL MORE SO.

WILL MCDONALD, 2542 Dearborn Street, Chicago, gratefully acknowledges a cure of Eczema, or Salt Rheum, on head, neck, face, arms and legs for seventeen years; not able to move, except on hands and knees, for one year; not able to help himself for eight years; tried hundreds of remedies; doctors pronounced his case hopeless. Permanently cured by the CUTICURA REMEDIES.

MORE WONDERFUL YET.

H. E. CARPENTER, Henderson, N. Y., cured of Psoriasis or Leprosy, of twenty years' standing, by CUTICURA REMEDIES. The most wonderful cure on record. A dustpanful of scales fell from him daily. Physicians and his friends thought he must die. Cure sworn to before a Justice of the Peace and Henderson's most prominent citizens.

DON'T WAIT.

WRITE TO US for these testimonials in full or send direct to the parties. Don't wait. Now is the time to cure every species of Itching, Scaly, Pimply, Scrofulous, Inherited, Contagious and Copper-Colored Diseases of the Blood, Skin and Scalp, with Loss of Hair.

WALKS IN LONDON.

SEEING SIGHTS IN THE METROPOLIS.

At Sydenham's Crystal Palace.—In Billingsgate—At the Theatre—London Tower. Arms and Jewels—English Courts.

Extracts from private correspondence.

LONDON, July 12, 1884.—Last night we had word of the first ballot from the Chicago convention, and hope before I close this letter to hear the final result. On Thursday we visited the crystal palace, Sydenham. This is the same building which was erected for the great world's fair in 1851. It is still used for the exhibition of manufactures, and its art gallery contains some very fine paintings, but to one who saw our centennial exhibition, such attempts at anything of the kind as this are so dwarfed that they are not appreciated. I went away feeling that I had lost a day of valuable time.

Most of Americans have heard of the Billingsgate fish market. We paid it an early visit on Wednesday morning. It is situated a short distance above London bridge, and is difficult to approach by the narrow streets leading to it, owing to the press of wagons having the way. It is a large building fronting the Thames, devoted entirely to the sale of fish, which was at one time largely controlled by a lot of Amazonian fish women, noted for their vulgarity and profanity, hence the term "Billingsgate" language. There are very few women in the trade now. The fish are brought directly here from the fishing grounds, principally from the North sea, and at this season come packed in ice. They are all carried up out of the vessels in boxes on the heads of men, and sold at auction to the dealers, who retail them at their respective stands. The principal fish are salmon, cod, haddock, turbot, sole, shrimp, mackerel and herring, lobsters, crabs, and a shell fish which look like snails. They also have some oysters, which have been taken from our oyster beds and planted, but they do not compare with ours in size or flavor. The quantity of herring sold in this market is very large, and they are of very fine quality.

Art and Literature.

We visited the British museum and the Dore gallery the same day. The museum is so large and contains so much, that it may justly be denominated one of the greatest national institutions of England, and anything like a description of it, by our paying it a casual visit, would be impossible. The sculpture galleries contain collections of art from Greece, Rome, India, Egypt and Assyria.

The collection of rare books and manuscripts is wonderful; among the former is the Bible translated by Luther into the German dated 1558-61, a Bible printed in Nuremburg in 1483, a Latin Bible 1460, Codex Alexandrius' original Greek copy of the 5th century. There are manuscripts in Sanscrit, Arabic, Persian and Greek; manuscript letters of Katharine of Arragon, Anne Boleyn, Lady Jane Grey, Mary Queen of Scots, and Sir Walter Raleigh, many of which are curious and even laughable. Here, too, are curiosities, connected with every form of English history, from the Roman conquest to the present day. To the student of history, this place is a rare treat.

The Dore gallery contains some very fine pictures, prominent among which is "Christ leaving the Pratorium," "Christ's entry into Jerusalem," "Moses before Pharoah" and "The Night of the Crucifixion."

Henry Irving at Home.

In the evening we attended the Lyceum theatre to hear Henry Irving as Malvaro, in Shakespeare's play of "Twelfth Night." The scenic effect was very brilliant and the acting good. I should think tragedy, rather than comedy, would be more in the line of Mr. Irving's genius. The audience was rather select, and we had an opportunity to see something of the style and appearance of our English cousins. The ladies are fine looking, dress very richly, and yet they did not have that neat and—I may be pardoned for saying—that sweet look of our American ladies. The gentlemen, while good mannered, are yet somewhat formal, stiff and cold.

At the Tower.

The tower of London is one of the great landmarks of English history. As we descend Tower hill, the heavy walls of this ancient pile rise up before us, midst the surrounding mass of modern buildings, grim witnesses of a bygone age. While contemplating the tower, the mind naturally reverts to the Norman Conquest, and the ruthless endeavor to quench the spirit of liberty in the bosom of the Saxon; the blending of the two races into one harmonious whole, has produced a people who, after centuries of strife and civil war—the evidences of which the history of this old state prison bears witness—have carried civilization into the furthermost parts of the earth.

This is the depository of arms of all kinds, some of which are very antique. The armour room contains some of the most ancient and curious steel and chain armour, helmets, spears, battle axes and all manner of death dealing implements; suits of armour worn by Henry VIII Charles II, the identical block upon which was beheaded Lords Balmorino, Kilmarnock and Lovat in 1746, on Tower hill, they being the first state prisoners beheaded.

The scaffold site is marked with a tablet and inscription, telling where Anna Boleyn, Catharine Howard and Lady Jane Grey were beheaded.

Beauchamp's tower, where many state prisoners were confined, contains some curious figures and inscriptions cut in the stone by those prisoners.

The style of the architecture of this tower is of the reigns of John, 1199, and Henry III, 1216. St. Peter's chapel connected with this state prison is a very old piece of architecture of the Norman period. Here are buried Katharine and Anne Boleyn, two of Henry VIII's queens, also the duke of Monmouth, who was beheaded in the reign of James II.

The crown jewels are kept in the Wakefield tower. There are the crowns of the present Queen Victoria, and a number of others, and very rich and costly jewels, plate, swords of state; the jewels of the orders of the Garter, Bath, Star of India, St. George and St. Michael, and the Thistle.

From the tower we visit Smithfield, which was once outside of the walls of London, but now in the heart of the city, where there is now the largest meat market in London.

Here is a tablet inserted in the walls of the St. Bartholomews hospital, founded by Rhave, 1102, and refounded by Henry VIII, in 1546, which commemorates the deaths at the stake by fire in the reign of Mary 1555, '56 and '57.

The Wheeled Turnouts.

We go to Hyde Park in the evening, and see a number of fine turnouts. Among the most "distinguished looking" persons seen here, are the drivers and footmen of gentlemen's carriages, in russet top boots, white knee breeches, fine coats with large gilt buttons, and high silk hats and black cockades; they look and feel imposing. It turned out to be a rainy afternoon, and the display was not as good as usual.

We drove around the park; it is very pretty, but for size and natural beauty does not compare with Fairmount park, in Philadelphia.

The Prince Albert memorial is in this park; it is a very chaste piece of Gothic architecture. We found these Albert memorials in all the principal cities of the kingdom. He was much beloved and the people delighted to honor his memory.

Bench and Bar.

We visited the new temple, which is a massive structure, on the site of the old Temple Bar, and is where all the courts are held. We were in several of the court rooms during the sessions; the judges and lawyers impressed us very favorably, but the rooms are very uncomfortable, small, cramped and badly ventilated. They do not compare with our Lancaster court room. The judges and lawyers wear grey wigs; the lawyers address the court from their seats, which are ranged before the court with little desks in front, like those of our school boys—but they have good courts.

Out to Oxford.

Yesterday we went to Oxford, one of the great seats of learning in England. It is 62 miles from London on the Great Western railroad, from Paddington station. The road follows the Thames and passes through the old town of Reading, a name very familiar to Pennsylvanians, and after which our flourishing city of Reading was named. Like its namesake, it is quite a railroad centre, and has large manufacturing interests.

We pass through the best wheat growing district we have yet seen in England. We reach Oxford in about two hours, procure a guide and visit a number of the colleges. There being 21 in number we found it impossible to visit them all and took the most interesting. Christ's church, Corpus Christi, Morton, Magdalen, New, Queens and University. The greater number of these institutions are very old, containing libraries of rare value and galleries of the portraits of founders, teachers and graduates, embracing the most eminent names in English history in both church and state.

The buildings are on the grandest and most extensive scale, with quadrangles tastefully laid out and planted with flowers, the sod as soft as velvet and as level as a floor, besides beautiful parks and walks shaded with giant oaks and elms.

The cathedral, which is both the chapel of Christ's church and the chief church of the diocese of Oxford, is a venerable pile, whose antiquity is far greater than the college with which it is now combined.

The earliest annals of the church date back to Saxon times, A. D., 740. The cathedral is a rich specimen of the mediaval architecture, in 1180, the main fabric of the present church was completed. The college is the one founded by the great Cardinal Wolsey, whose portrait from life hangs in the dining hall.

Last Days in London.

This being our last working day in London, we have worked at great disadvantage, as it is a rainy day, and to those who have been here I need not say what that is.

This morning we visited St. Paul's cathedral before referred to; it is the largest and one of the oldest churches in London. It is open to visitors daily, except when service is being held. It contains statues and the tombs of some of England's most distinguished statesmen and soldiers. The Duke of Wellington and Admiral Nelson, are both buried in the crypt. The funeral car upon which the body of the duke was borne at his burial remains in the crypt with all its trappings; it is a massive affair and was drawn by twelve of the largest horses in London. We had hoped to get tickets of admission to the Houses of Parliament during their sessions, but owing to the very small number of seats for spectators, and the great demand for them, we found it almost impossible to get them, but as the houses are not in session on Saturday, the public are then admitted, and we went, notwithstanding the rain.

The building stands on the site of a former palace. The present one, which is called the Palace of Westminster, was built, or at least occupied, in 1852.

There are a great many rooms, towers, halls, etc., but the queen's robing room, the royal gallery, the princess chamber, the House of Peers, and the House of Commons are the principal ones. The House of Lords is not as large as the Senate chamber at Washington; its decorations are of the most elegant character, and yet it struck me that the comfort of its members are not commensurate with the rest of its appointments. There are no desks nor separate seats for the members, but they sit on long seats with elegant red leather cushions. This will apply equally to the House of Commons. We saw the famous wool sack on which the chancellor sits; it certainly is a very large seat; but I don't think a very comfortable one. The queen's robing room, royal gallery and princess rooms are all very rich.

We have endeavored to see as much of London as was possible in the week spent here. We have seen many of the public buildings, parks and gardens, its law courts and busy marts of trade, and yet much remains to be seen, which must be foregone. I will feel a sense of relief in getting away from its noise and din. We will leave here on Monday morning for Brussels via. Ostend, and will determine our future route after getting there.

The cholera in southern France is giving us some uneasiness, and if upon getting to Brussels we find it safe, will likely go to Paris, and from there into Northern Italy. If not, we will go through Holland and Germany and try and get into Switzerland. We met Ernest Zahm for a few moments on Tuesday at the Ludgate Hill railroad station. He was going to Paris in a day or two.

G. W. H.

P. S.—Since writing the above the morning papers inform us of the action of the Chicago convention. I think they have made a happy deliverance—and have no doubt that the Democrats will elect their ticket. The papers here commenting upon it, speak very favorably; they fear the foreign policy of Blaine would be of the "jingo" order.
