GHOST STORIES.

THEORY OF THOUGHT TRANSFERENCE

some Matvellocs Occurrences That Are Well Antheuticated-A Hogus Ghest Comes to Grief-An English Tale, London Spectator.

Mr. E. Guerney and Mr. F. W. H Myers publish a further instalment of the strange stories they are collecting, the most remarkable by far being one related by Sir E. Hornby, late chief judge of the consular court of China and Japan, and a man not only of undoubted truthful-ness, but of strong rough sense. He was accustomed to allow reporters to call at his house for his written judgments:
"They generally availed themselves of the opportunity, especially one reporter, who was also the editor of an evening paper. He was a peculiar man, reticent about himself, and I imagine had a his-tory. In appearance he was also peculiar. I only knew him as a reporter, and had no other relations with him. On the day when the event occurred in 1875 or 1876, I went to my study an hour or two after peared in 1879. Fairman was supposed dinner, and wrote out my judgment. It to have been murdered, but as no trace of was then about half-past 11. I rang for crime was ever discovered, the matter was the butler, gave him the envelope, and gradually forgotten. Several days ago told him to give it to the reporter who Alexander Moore, a well-known and intelshould call for it. I was in bed to fore 12. I am a very light sleeper, and my wife a very heavy one. Indeed, it is difficult to rouse her out of her first sleep, The bed-a French one-facut the fire-place; on the mantelpice was a clock, and the gas in the chaudelier was turned down out only so low as to admit of my seeing fore him the ghost of Harvey Fairman, his the time of the night, for-waking easily clothes torn and muddy, and his throat and frequently-I often smoked a cigar-cut. In the conventional hollow tones the ette before I went to sleep again, and alspirit told Moore he had been murdered ways desired to know the hour. I had and the body hid beneath the floor of his gone to sleep, when I was awakened by house for two days, and then brought to hearing a tap at the study door, but think the ravine and concealed in a hollow tree. hearing a tap at the study door, but think the ravine and concealed in a hollow tree ing it might be the butler—linking in to Moore returned home with every appear see if the fire were safe and the gas ance of one suffering from extreme terror, turned off-I turned over with the view of getting to sleep again. Before I did so, I facts if necessary, heard a tap at my bedroom door. Still thinking it might be the butler, who might have something to say, I said, 'Come in.' The door opened, and, to my surprise, in walked Mr. —, I sat up and said: You have mistaken the door; but the butler has the judgment, so go and get it.' Instead of leaving the room he came to the foot edge of the bed. I aid: 'Mr. -, you forget yourself Have the goodness to walk out directly. This is rather an abure of my favor.' He looked deadly pale, but was dressed in his usual dress, and was certainly quite sober. and said: I know I am guilty of an un-warrantable intrusion, but finding that you were not in your study! have ventured to some here.' I was losing my temper, but something in the man's manner dis inclined me to jump out of bed to eject him by force. So I said simply; This is too bad, really; pray leave the room at once.' Instead of doing so, he put one hand on the footrail, and gently, and as if in pain, sat down on the foot of the bed. glanced at the clock and saw that it was about twenty minutes past 1. I said. The butler has had the judgment since alf past 11; go and get it.' He said: Pray forgive me; if you knew all the cirumstances you would. Time presses. Pray give me a precis of your judgment. nd I will take a note in my book of it,' hawing his reporter's book out of his breast-pecket. I said I will do nothing of the kind. Go down stairs, find the

Fine Carriage Builders,

Who let you in? He answered: 'No one.' 'Confound it,' I said, 'what the devil do you mean? Are you drunk?'

A Daughter's Meet and don't disturb me—you will the papers say so much about." "Indeed: Indeed?" "How thankful we should be cine."

A Daughter's Mise. He replied quietly 'No, and never shall be again; but I pray your lordship give me yeur decision, for my time is short.' I said: 'You don't seem to care about my time, and this is the last time I shall ever allow a reporter in my bouse 'He stopped me short, saying: 'This is the last time I shall ever see you anywhere.'

"Well, fearful that this commotion might arouse and frighten my wife, I shortly gave him the gist of my judgment in as few words as I could. He seemed to be taking it down in shorthand; it might have been two or three minutes. When I finished, he rose, thanked me for excus-ing his intrusion and for the consideration had always shown him and his col leagues, opened the door and went away. I looked at the clock; it was on the stroke of half-past one. (Lady Hornby now awoke, thinking she had heard talking; and her husband told her what had hap pened, and repeated the account when diversing next morning.) I went to the court a little before ten. The under care art a little before ten. The usher came nto my room to robe me, when he said : 'A sad thing happened last hight, ser. Poor - was found dead in his room,' 1 said: Bless my soul! dear me! What dhe die of, and when?" Well, ar, it appears he went up to his room as usual at ten to work at his pipers. His wife went up about twelve to he would be ready for hed the said: certain remed "I have only the judge's judgment by H. B. took to get ready and then I have marked." said he had been dead, he concluded, about an bour. I looked at the note book. There was the usual heading ; 'In the supreme court, before the chief judge -- v. --The chief judge gave judgment this morning in this case to the following effect '-and then followed a lew lines of ndecipherable shorthand."

The reporter, it should be added, neither ad nor could have left his house. Wo subless we do not see how Mr. Myers's theory of thought transference explains that story at all. The reporter never thought of sitting at the feet of Sir E. Hornby's bed.

They Won't Play Ghost Again.

Albany (Ind.) Ledger. A few evenings ago these same mischiavous young people determined to give Jerry [a colored man] a terrific fright. For this purpose a young married lady on the farm, Mrs. James Mann, and a colored woman employed in the family covered themselves with white sheets and took their stations in a little ravine near a gate opening into the farm, to remain secreted until such time as they could appear to Jerry in their sepulchral looking habiliment. Then Mrs. Mann's husband took charge of Jerry and conducted him out to the gate, his purpose being to bring him within sight of the improvised ghosts and have upon him. After waiting awhile, the feminine The most effective preparation for the removal of Corns, Buntons, Warts, etc., ever placed before the public.

I thought they were real ghosts, and I just concluded to fight it out with them or die right there." The woman had a very narrow escape from being killed.

Face to Face With a Ghost. There is great excitement among the countaineers living in the eastern part of Wayne county, Wost Va., over the alleged appearance of the ghost of Harvey Fairman, a farmer, who mysteriously disapligent young man, was out hunting, and had a curious experience. When at the head of a dark ravine, he says, he was confronted by what seemed to be a goose or other large bird, which attracted his attention and then ran into some bushes.
