WILLIS AND HOFFMAN.

TWO FAMOUS LITERARY CHARACTERS

Recollections of the "Kulckerbocker" Liter-

sry Circle-Charles Fenno Roffman's Lite

Darkened by Physical and Mental Ilie. George William Curtis in September Harper's While many of the noted writers of the Knickerbocker circle of half a century since are no longer famous nor even much known to the New York readers of to-day, yet the great Knickerbocker names are great still, and Irving, Cooper, Bryant and, perhaps, Halleck, although Halleck is fading, still hold the place they held with our fathers. Willis is probably rapidly passing out of the public mind, and the loiterers at Newport and Saratoga, at Nahant, Long Branch, Rickaway and Long Beach scarcely know the name of Philip Slingsby, or the other gay little "society" sketches of Willis. The misfortune of his fate was twofold, that he was tempted to turn his bright talent the first of our proper "magazinists." He had the lightness and care of touch the distinctive writer for the magazines, and whose success contradicts the old saying that easy writing is hard reading. But Willis's case became at last a manner ism, and a certain tone of affectation and apparent insincerity crept over his page. This, however, was rather unjust to the author. Willis was essentially an amiable mae, and he was early flattered and successful. He loved case and luxury, and he listened too fondly to the sirons. He was man of the boudeir and the drawing room, trained in the Byronic tradition, and with no very lofty sense of the duty and to Miss Luiu, and she returned to the con-responsibility of the literary life. He vent to carry out her original intention of wrote enormously. His name was the synonym of a certain clever grace and audacity. But how many of the younger readers of the "Easy Chair" have read the or detached from the necks of the teeth. Let "Pencillings by the Way," or "Letters from under a Bridge," or even the scrip health, SOZODONT is the best remedial tural poems which were once thought to be so beautiful? Hoffman was a year older than Willis, and he belonged to the same Kuicker-bocker group. Willis came from Boston, but Hoffman was of an old Knicker bocker family. Willis had a certain En-ropean tone and character, but Hoffman was completely American Willis died seventeen years ago, when he was sixty cars old. Hoffman died the other day at he insane retreat in Pennsylvania where he had been secluded for more than thirty years—so absolutely secluded, indeed, that Bartlett's book of "Familiar Quotations' records him as dying in 1850. Hoff-man's books, like Willis's are read no more, and his name survives only in his familiar song, "Sparkling and Bright." l'hat alone gives his name yet a longer date than Willis's, and the sad story of his life will be long tenderly told in our Ameri oan literary biography. Those who still recall his manly figure. and his fresh, breezy, gay manner, will remember the sense of profuse vitality with which he impressed those who saw him He was a lover of the woods and waters, Hazel, American Pine, Canada Fir, Marigold, Clover Blossoms, etc., called SANFORD'S a natural sportsman, and his taste is ro-RADICAL CURE, for the immediate relief flected in his tales and sketches. His poems, as is always true of a great mulchoes of greater poots of his time they show his pooric feeling and facility in and a certain heartiness of nature which tal calamity which arrested his career, and practically ended his life worly forty years ego, was not the only so row which this rave and generous man endured. As a of cleven a sore misfortune befell him the loss of a leg. The circumstances this event have not been very clearly understood, and the kindness of a relative of Mr. Hoffman enables us to put them upon permanent record. An old letter of his mother's, dated in New York on the 4th of December, 1817, and written to a sister in Paris, tells the which was characteristic of the writing of bat day:

"I was very much gradued by your letter handed by Mr. Gouverneur, and day of his arrival, towards the close of it, he was down on the rocks watching the steam ferry boat, and as it came up he jumped on board and had a role up to the wharf. This he had done several times, and thought to take one more role are he went home to diener. But alas I in boat came up faster than was appeted, and in lay of his arrival, towards the close of it, came up faster than was expected, and in the not of jumping his right log was care ht, the act of jumping his right by was care her, and so shockingly manghed actor quive immediate amputation. TAKING THE BLACK VEIL. A Young Woman Retires to a Convent With

Sister Mary Fidelis, of St. Louis, took the black veil at the Visitation Convent, Friday, and bid farewell to the world forever. Archbishop Ryan conducted the services, it being his last official act before leaving for the See of Philadelphia, to which he has been ordered, and for which he will take his departure on next Monday morning. Sister Fidelis was Miss Lulu Taylor, a leading society belle three years ago, and daughter of George R. Taylor, who died in 1880, leaving nearly $1,000,000, most of it bequeathed to his numerous family of children. Miss Lulu's share was $70,000. She attended the Visitation Convent.

conducted by the sisters of St. Francis de Sales, and soon determined to join the order. She deeded property to the value of $50,000 to two unmarried sisters, about $14,000 to a brother, and $6,000 she took with her to the convent. There was condition to the deed that if she changed into ready money, and that he did it. His gayety and his graceful fluency made him her mind and returned to the world the property should revert to her. She took her novitiate vows last April, and, after which are traditionally characteristic of remaining in the convent a few weeks, returned to the world, claimed the property, and donated it to the convent. Her brother and sister to whom she had deeded the property professed a willingness to give it up if she remained out of the convent, but would otherwise hold on They claimed that undue influence had been used to induce her to take the property from her family and give it to the Smart of Bears," On the deck of a big Mississippi steamboa atood an aged Southern planter. Indicating by a sweep of his arm the waters the boat was passing over, he said to a passenger from the North. When I was twelve years old I stilled my first bear on a new plantation my father was then enting of atorest that grew directly over the waters out of this bend. That was a mighty good nhantation are there was right smart of bears there, too. But that one thousand acress of land went into the Mississippi liver years are?

It is putting no stiain upon the figure to say that great forests of youthful nope, womanly beauty and manly strength are swept in the same way every year into the great, turble to rent of disease and death. Yet it should not be so. I hat it is so is a disgrace as well as a loss. People are largely too carcless or too stupld to defend their own latereds—the most precious of which is health. That gone, all is gone. Dis-case is simple, but to reckiessness or ignorwhich is besith. That gone, all is gone.
