That was was then cutting of a forest that grew directly over the waters out of this bend. That was a mighty goed chantation, and there was right smart of bears there, too lite that one thousand acress of land went into the Mississippi river years ago.

It is putting no strain upon the figure to say that great forests of youthful rope, womanly beauty and manly strength are swept in the same way every year into the great, turbut forrent of disease and death. Yet it should not be so. That it is so is a disgrace as well as a loss. People are largely too careless or too stupid to defend their own interests—the most precious of which is health. That gone, all is gone. Disease is simple, but to recklessness or ignornance the simplest things might as well be complex as a proposition in Conic Sections.
